HITLER OFFERS PEACE

BERLIN, July 19—Hitler offered peace to embattled England today.

As an alternative he threatened the horrors of a blitzkrieg from air, water and land against the British Isles and British possessions, by Nazi Germany and her ally, Fascist Italy. The peace offer was made at an historic session of the Reichstag, attended by Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian foreign minister.

HITLER'S LIFE OR DEATH OFFER TO BRITAIN TODAY

BERLIN, July 19 (AP)—The Reichstag was called to meet tonight to hear a historic declaration which, it is generally taken for granted, will be Adolf Hitler's offer to Britain of one more chance for peace as the only alternative to blitzkrieg destruction.

While the announcement of the session did not say so specifically, it generally was interpreted to mean Hitler himself would speak.

The Reichstag call coincided with the arrival here of Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian foreign minister, which was taken here as an indication of Axis collaboration in the Reichstag declaration.

It is generally known that during the past fortnight Germany has prepared the entire Atlantic coast from German-occupied Narvik, Norway, to Brest, France, for the greatest onslaught in history on the British Isles.

It was taken for granted here that such an offensive would begin soon after a Reichstag speech in case Hitler's last call for peace goes unanswered.

It was recalled that in a Reichstag speech on Oct. 6, 1939, Hitler proffered peace to the Allies, calling his offer then "einmalig," meaning it was to be given once only and was final, but since then, in the German view, the success of German arms has been such that the Fuehrer could afford to make another proposal.

"There can only be real peace in Europe and throughout the world if Germany and England come to an understanding," Hitler said last fall.

RECALLS OCTOBER TALK

After reviewing his Polish victory, Hitler declared his demand for the return of German's war-lost colonies was "not a demand backed by force but a demand based on political justice, sane economic principles."

NO SIGN OF WEAKNESS

Hitler also warned in his October speech that his proposal was not to be taken as a sig nof weakness.

Since he followed that with successes that culminated in crushing France, political circles here felt certain he similarly would follow his words with deeds in case Britain rejects his offer.

The news of the calling of the Reichstag reached the Berlin public in the first editions of evening papers.

PARIS IRE UP AGAINST PETAIN

PARIS, July 19 (via Berlin) (AP)—A rising chorus of protests against the new French regime of aged Marshal Philippe Petain is keeping Paris stirred up politically.

"A new situation requires new men," cried the newspaper Les Dernieres Nouvelles de Paris. "We demand them."

The new publication La France au Travail took the same stand.

It directed sharp criticism at the political pasts of ministers in Petain's authoritarian government, especially vice-Premier Pierre Laval, and called for delay in establishing a new constitution until the "situation" becomes stabilized.

Meanwhile, a decree of the French government proclaimed in Vichy ordered no one, high or low, henceforth may serve in any capacity in French local or national government or any public service unless he is French born or a French father.

Only exceptions listed were for persons who served in French armed forces in the World War or their direct descendants.

All persons who do not fill these requirements have been notified of their immediate discharge, with indemnity for their years of service. If they have served 15 years or more they will be pensioned.

Petain's government is understood to be negotiating with German authorities for a return to Paris from the temporary capital at Vichy.

In general, Parisian business is returning to normal, although German military police have assumed rigid control of all highway traffic through French territory under Nazi occupation, where only persons with special passes now may travel.

Weak Leaders Cost France Only Hope of Winning War

By KENNETH T. DOWNS

NEW YORK, July 19 (INS)—Game, astute little Paul Reynaud was a thoroughly alarmed and angry man. His face was drawn and his black eyes flashed as he summoned Edouard Daladier.

This was the day, in the first week of May, that the French leaders knew the Allies were hopelessly washed up in Norway. The nation mas not to learn for two or three days more.

His sullen, resentful minister for war and national defense had no sooner limped into his presence before Reynaud came to the point—Gamelin must go.

With expert assistance, Reynaud said, he had gone into the conduct of French operations in Norway and discovered enough to convince him he would have to dismiss Gen. Maurice Gustaf Gamelin as commander-in-in-chief.

He carefully went over the evidence with Daladier. But Daladier, whose personal dislike for Reynaud amounted to hatred, flatly refused to agree to a change. It was no secret that he was waiting to upset Reynaud's government, and now he warned he would resign and provoke a political crisis rather than consent to Gamelin's removal.

DELAY PROVES COSTLY

The matter was brought before the cabinet on May 9. After a violent argument, it remained undecided. Reynaud considered resignation. But a few hours later, in the early morning of May 10, the great offensive on the western front began.

Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg were being overrun. Tons of bombs were being loosed on northern France and the first of those unforgettable tides of refugees which were to paralyze the French armies, already were beginning to choke the roads.

The president of the republic urged Reynaud not to resign. Daladier was obdurate on Gamelin so Reynaud, feling it might do more harm than good to makea switch at such a critical bour, let the generalissimo remain.

It required the break-through on the Meuse in the next few days, revealing the pitiful inadequacy of the French military preparations, to bring about the end of Gamelin as commander-in-chief. Gen. Weygand, the much-advertised "fireman," was rushed in to try to save the day.

Weygand did his best. His improvised defense-in-depth slowed the enemy advance and exacted a heavy toll of men and machines.

It was too late.

AMAZING SITUATION

The Ninth Army was shattered, the Seventh and part of the First armies were cut off in Belgium, and vast quantities of sorely-needed material were lost. The fire was beyond control when the fireman arrived.

This story, with its implications of lack of foresight, inefficiency, divided counsel, and personal political animosities at the very hour the nation's fate was being cast, may seem incredible enough.

But even more incredible was the fact that the high command had not been shaken up severely at the start of the war, or even before hostilities commenced. For it was an open secret among the career men of the army that Gamelin would have to go.

That is why a large percentage of the younger element in the active army hoped desperately that the Germans would attack early.

I first heard this amazing wish expressed one night last October by one of the most brilliant young officers of the Etat-Major of G. Q. G.

WARSHIP BATTLES OFF NAZI BOMBERS

LONDON, July 19 (AP)—British and German air fighters engaged in a fierce catch-as-catch-can battle over the Straits of Dover today when a cloud of raiders swarmed down on a destroyer guarding the southeast English coast.

The warship, which was reported undamaged, fought off the attack with intense anti-aircraft fire and brought down on plane.

British fighters chased the bombers back to the French coast and engaged them in a sky battle between Boulogne and Calais in which, observers said, they saw at least four planes falling in flames into the sea.

BOMBERS SET FIRE

The attack was the most spectacular of a series of bombing raids this morning on northeast and northwest England, southwest Scotland and on a trawler only 17 miles off the southeast coast of Ireland as the Germans renewed their steady battering tactics against this island fortress.

Six enemy planes swooped low and dropped a salvo of 30 bombs near a southeast town in the face of terrific barrage and a fierece chase by fighters. "Considerable damage" was done, a fire was started, and one of the bombers was sunk in the sea.

Several hreas in southwest Scotland were bombed after a bombing of a city in southeast Scotland in which a 16-family apartment house was struck.

BURIED IN DEBRIS

The air ministry reported this morning one bomber in this attack was shot down.

Eight bombs were dropped in the Scottish raid this morning and workers sought a number of persons believed buried in debris. There were at least two casualties.

The trawler City of Aberdeen, attacked by bombs and machineguns by a plane off the Old Head of Kinsale, Ireland, sprang a leak when bombs exploded nearby and was beached. The crew was saved.

One German was shot down when British planes intervened in another attack by four enemy aircraft on trawlers.

F. D. Barely Controls Party as Bolts Loom Over Naming Wallace

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service Staff Correspondent

CHICAGO, July 19—The New Deal today took over complete control of the Democratic party with President Roosevelt accepting a third term nomination after a rebellious Democratic national convention barely nominated his favorite, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, former Republican, for the Vice-Presidency.

FIRST LADY SPEAKS—Amid a cheering ovation, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, nation's first lady, speaks to Democrats after nomination of her husband for a third term. She said that regardless of the campaign, the President "would be on the job." Mrs. Roosevelt arrived in Chicago in a chartered plane.

The President announced his duties in the White House would keep him from active campaigning, but that he would use the radio to make frequent reports to the American people. He said he would have "no time for political debate," but warned he would speak promptly to answer any "falsification of the record."

It was apparent he planned to use Secretary Wallace for campaign touring against the Republican ticket of Wendell Willkie and Charles L. McNary.

The whole power of the New Deal was used to win Wallace the running mate's position in a session rife with dissension.

The fight against Wallace probably constituted the greatest display of convention opposition to a President's choice for running-mate in all the known history of American politics.

DELEGATES ANGERED

The convention adjourned early today with a large number of angry, disgruntled delegates — who booed the name of Wallace every time it was mentioned—warning that the Democratic ticket faces an uncertain fate in November. Many delegates actually predicted the loss of their states—states like New York, Massachusetts, Indiana and Missouri.

The President, however, placed

F. D. WANTS FARLEY TO RUN CAMPAIGN

CHICAGO, July 19 (AP)—Uncertainty over who would manage the 1940 Democratic campaign persisted today despite reliable reports that President Roosevelt favors Frank C. Walker of New York if James A. Farley steps down as national committee chairman.

The enigma may not be removed for some time. The national committee, meeting today (at 11 a. m. Boston time), was expected to turn the question over to a subcommittee with authority to carry out the President's wishes.

The name of Senator James F. Byrnes of South Carolina, was heard repeatedly in convention circles as a possible successor to Farley, but friends said he did not want the job.

WANTS FARLEY TO STAY

Sources close to the White House said that Mr. Roosevelt's reported choice of Walker, 54-year-old former director of the National Emergency Council, resulted from the belief that Farley would give up the post he has held since 1932 to become President of the New York Yankees Baseball Club.

Friends of the Chief Executive described him as "extremely anxious," nevertheless, to have Farley stay on the job. Farley has said he would let his plans be known at today's committee session.

WALKER LITTLE KNOWN

It was said that Walker had not agreed to take the job, pleading that his business interests would not permit him to devote time to politics. They added, however, that they expected the President to win him over.

Persons who will aid in selecting a chairman said that if Walker refused the post, a strategy board would be named to run the campaign and he would be asked to be a member.

Walker is one of the least known of Mr. Roosevelt's associates, although his job on the emergency council was to coordinate the far-flung federal set-up in the early days of the New Deal.

A native of Pennsylvania, he is president of the Comerford-Publix Theater chain, which operates in his home state and New York.

His political career started in Montana, where he served as a county prosecutor and state legislator. His only political post in recent years was that of treasurer of the Democratic National Committee in 1932.

Nazis Blast F. D. Speech

BERLIN, July 19 (AP)—Political circles, commenting today on President Roosevelt's acceptance speech, privately made no secret of their opinion that by aiding the axis' enemies, the President is prolonging the war.

His reference to the necessity of national unity was met with the rejoinder:

"The greatest traitors were those Germans and Italians who went to America and were incited against the authoritarian states."

Fascism and Nazism, they held, do not enslave the people nor interfere with social justice, as the President declared.

Official sources were silent.

LONDON, July 19 (INS)—In an editorial under the headline, "The New Lincoln," the London Evening Standard today characterized President Roosevelt's acceptance speech as "one of the great pro-

F. D. GOLDEN VOICE CALMS DELEGATES

By AUSTEN LAKE

CHICAGO, July 19—Like a gentle rain upon a sun-scorched earth, the cool, measured tones of Franklin D. Roosevelt soothed the fevered ears of this Democratic convention after a week of nerves and one of the most unruly sessions any political gathering has ever seen.

It was a level, measured voice which came over the electric horns like aerial anesthesia and the great bevels of humanity which had stayed on through the heat and tedium of the fight for the vice-presidential nomination, sat motionless and quiet. Faces were serious and folk forgot even to stir the humid air with their fans.

Son Elliott Roosevelt who unfilially had sponsored the candidacy of Texas Jack Garner against his father, sat within hand reach at my left, pinching the lobe of an ear. He heard the paternal voice say:

"When the conflict broke out last September it was my intention not to accept reelection . . ."

Elliott wishpered something to his wife, a perky young woman, and grinned.

PRESIDENT'S WIFE LISTENS

On the speaker's stage Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, having admonished the convention a little earlier in the evening that this was "their campaign" and the burden of reelecting her husband would rest largely "on their energies" sat crossleggedly with chin cupped in a palm.

She heard her husband say:

"A party cannot draft a President. Only the people . . ."

MIDDIES TO PARADE FOR BOSTON

From three mighty battleships dominating the Boston waterfront, Annapolis midshipmen will tomorrow visit here for the first time in three years.

More than 1200 middies will be on deck, but only portions will be permitted to go ashore for sightseeing and recreational tours, to be climaxed by the big parade through downtown streets Monday noon.

There will be no large scale repetition of the night here in 1937, when midshipmen thronged downtown night spots with pretty girl escorts after the Navy-Harvard football game.

Tomorrow the future admirals will reach here from Newport, R. I., aboard the battleships Texas, New York and Arkansas, the former docking at the Navy Yard and the latter pair anchoring in President Roads.

The Monday parade will form in Dewey sq. at noon and proceed along Summer, Federal, Milk, Washington, School and Beacon sts., to the intersection of Charles st., where they will enter the Boston Common for drill and lunch.

Police Aide Called In Laundry Probe

The plaintiff laundries rested their case today in four equity suits seeking damages and injunctions against Police Commr. Timilty, his brother Walter and the Elk Laundry, which Walter allegedly operates.

Following resting of the plaintiffs' case, Attys. F. T. Leahy and Charles Hamilton, for the Timiltys, moved for directed verdicts for the defense and asked that the motions be argued in the lobby.

When newspapermen asked permission to attend, Judge Allan G. Buttrick said he was agreeable, but the defense lawyers objected and the press was excluded.

FIREARM WITNESS

Evidencing that the motions has been disallowed, the attorneys later swore in Police Capt. Francis M. Tiernan, named in testimony, as its first witness.

Before the plaintiffs rested their case, in which they charge that the Timilty brothers pressed police into service to try and switch laundry clients over to the Elk Laundry, Atty. George E. Farnum, for the plaintiffs, produced a surprise Supreme court ruling.

In earlier procedure in the case, testimony by laundry employes as to what they had been told regarding alleged police pressure in bringing about client switches, was ruled out.

Farnum produced a Supreme Court decision of a short time ago, however, stating that such testimony was admissable. Regardless of this, however, Judge Buttrick refused to allow such testimony permanently, except for the record and with exceptions taken by Farnum.

ANSWERS RECORDED

The witness on the stand, John J. Brosnahan of Clarkson st., Dorchester, employe of the plaintiff Suffolk Linen Co., was allowed to have his answers recorded, although officially ruled out

Brosnahan was asked about the discontinuance by Fleming's Cafe, Dorchester ave., Dorchester, of laundry business it had been doing with the Suffolk.

The witness replied that Joseph Fleming had told him "the police have been in."

Asked about Billy Hurley's Log Cabin, Roxbury, Brosnahan said he had talked over with Joseph Curran the reason the laundry business had been transferred to the Ely Laundry.

"He told me the police had been in," said the witness, "and to have Tom (Thomas Stretch, one of the Suffolk owners), come down and see Billy Hurley."

Questioned regarding the Old Dugout and a conversation with Harry Goldberg, the witness said:

"He said he'd like to see Thomas Stretch because the police had been in."

The witness also said that Jeremiah McGillicuddy of Mack's Tap, Dartmouth st., had been talked with.

"He said he had been solicited by police," the witness declared. "He told me to continue leaving rags and he would try to get them out and get us back again.

Clue in Brockton Spurs Gang Hunt

Search for the roving Laconia gang veered today to southern Massachusetts after a youth resembling one of the bandits tried to have two sets of fake auto plates welded in Brockton.

Squads of state troopers were rushed to guard chief highways leading to Cape Cod while Rhode Island state police were warned to watch roads at the state line, in case members of the gang should try to escape in that direction.

The Brockton welder reported to police that a youth closely resembling James K. Tillotson, alias James Stuart, entered his shop and requested that halves of broken plates be welded together in order to make two sets of false auto tags.

He turned quickly and drove off when his request was refused, the metal worker said. In the stranger's possession were several sets of Massachusetts and New Hampshire plates.

MOTHER HAD FAITH IN BOY WHO KILLED HER DAUGHTER

GROTON, Ct., July 19—Broken in grief, a sobbing mother cried out today against the fate that had made her favorite daughter victim in a tragic love-killing.

She was the mother of 18-year-old Rita Wheaton, who was bludgeoned and stoned to death, allegedly by a 20-year-old Pawtucket youth, Hugh Kenyon, because she refused to marry him.

Rita Wheaton

"I just can't believe Hugh would do such a thing," sobbed Mrs. Guy Wheaton. "He was so quiet and gentlemanly.

"There was never a nicer boy who came to our house—and now he has done this dreadful thing. I trusted him so."

While Kenyon, a jobless printer's apprentice, was in jail here, awaiting a hearing July 29, police revealed that in her last dying words, Rita forgave her sweetheart.

SLAYING DESCRIBED

Police detailed an amazing statement they said was made by the 20-year-old alleged slayer.

"After I hit her with a blackjack, her head began to bleed but we went on talking," police quoted Kenyon as saying.

"She asked to be taken home, and she said she would forgive me. I struck her again with the blackjack and she started to scream.

"Then I knocked her down and shut off her cries by hitting her about the head with a stone."

FOUND IN BROOK

Police said the youth told the story of the killing after the girl's body, with a white belt fastened around the throat, had been removed from a brook at Groton Center.

Kenyon, whose mother figured in a strikingly similar love crime 20 years ago, was quoted as saying he took Miss Wheaton riding in her father's car on the fatal night.

"I had been keeping company with Rita about three years. We were returning from New London over route 84, when I asked her to marry me.

"Rita told me she couldn't think about marriage now because she was helping to support her family.

"Then the thought suddenly came over me that if she would not marry me I would kill her, then take my own life.

"She didn't know of my intentions. I stopped the car at the side of the road in a woods on the highway about two miles west of Old Mystic.

"After we got out of the car, I tried again to get her to agree to marry me. She wouldn't do it. When she turned her head to look away, I pulled out my blackjack and hit her on the back of the head."

REFUSED TO WED

It was at this point of the alleged confession that the youth told of the girl's willingness to forgive him and of her refusal, in the face of extreme fear and death, to agree to marriage.

Police quoted Kenyon further as stating:

"I then dragged her over the ground to the Chippadaza Brook. It was about 50 feet from the point where I had hit her. Then I took the belt from her waist and strangled her.

"I figured the body would be carried away by the current, so I weighted it down with four big stones. I tied them to her legs and threw the body into the brook."

Police said the youth was unemotional while reciting the alleged confession. During his arraignment before Judge Rodney Smith 12 hours after the killing, young Kenyon was reported to have told police:

"I may get the chair—so what?"

The victim's grief-stricken mother, Mrs. Guy Wheaton of Westerly, R. I., was stunned when informed that Kenyon had confessed, for, she said, she had known him for years as a "model boy."

While he had kept company with Rita for three years, he had been a friend of the family for seven years, she said. There are 10 other children in her family.

Quiet and gentlemanly, young Kenyon never failed to ask her permission whenever he wanted to take Rita out, the mother said.

The youth's mother, Mrs. Edna Mabel Kenyon, moved to retain counsel for her son today as she went to his defense. Back in 1920, the mother herself allegedly shot to death Dr. Herbert Tetlow, wealthy Groton bachelor physician, as the climax to a romance of five years.

Eventually convicted of manslaughter, she served a six-year prison sentence before being paroled. At the time of her release, she was declared sane, police said.

Young Kenyon, after the killing, sought the advice of a friend and later a priest, who persuaded him to surrender, according to officers.

HUB HOUSING RENTS WILL SET NEW LOW

Rentals will range from a new low of $14 to $25 a month at the new Federal housing projects in Charlestown, it was indicated today.

Francis X. Lane, executive director of the Boston Housing Authority, said that applications for tenancy will be received from everybody in the low income group.

This would include, he indicated, the acceptance of applications from those receiving city welfare aid as well as from those employed on federal works programs.

He said definite announcement on rental prices and instructions for applications will be made within a few days.

The first of the new projects in Charlestown will be ready for occupancy Aug. 15, it was expected. The reported rentals of $14-$25 are lower than those at the Old Harbor Village project where they were fixed at $22.15 to $31.90 monthly.

Legion to Fight Calling Guard

Opposition to President Roosevelt's plan for calling 50,000 National Guardsmen to the colors may be registered during deliberations of the national convention of the American Legion here Sept. 23 to 26.

This was indicated today in the expressed opinion of Raymond J. Kelly, national commander, that national guard divisions should not be pressed into service unless absolutely necessary, as many guardsmen are supporting families and hold responsible jobs.

Other serious subjects will provide a grave atmosphere for this year's get together of an estimated 300,000 Legionnaires and their families.

Rice Indicted, Remains Calm

EDGARTOWN, July 19 — Informed that the special grand jury had indicted him for the sex murder of 70-year-old Mrs. Clara M. Smith, R. Huntington Rice, 54, elocution teacher, took the news calmly and philosophically today.

"I'm naturally bitterly disappointed that I was not given the opportunity of appearing before the jurors and telling my story," he said from his jail cell here.

The jury, called by Dist. Atty. W. C. Crossley, reported two indictments against the tall, well-groomed suspect who has steadfastly maintained innocence since his arrest.

One charged murder, the other criminal assault.

Judge Edward F. Hanify of Superior Court announced Aug. 5 as the tentative date for arraignment.

WILLKIE IN FARM PARLEY

COLORADO SPRINGS, Col. July 19 (AP)—Wendell L. Willkie arranged to leave here today for a farm conference at Denver.

Willkie sat on a couch in his apartment at a Colorado Springs hotel during President Roosevelt's talk last night. He chuckled occasionally.

Lighting cigarettes during pauses in the President's talk, Willkie smiled broadly and put his feet on a coffee table when Mr. Roosevelt said that he would not accept the nomination on the demand only of the Democratic party.

The Republican nominee refused to elaborate his brief statement about Mr. Roosevelt's remarks. He also declined comment on the nomination of Secretary Wallace as Vice-President.

After talking farm problems yesterday with Governor George Wilson of Iowa, Willkie said he wanted to get additional ideas regarding the farm section of his formal acceptance speech. The talk will be delivered about August 10 at Elwood, Ind.

"I would like to discuss the cattle and grain problem with my hosts," Willkie said of his visit to Denver. The nominee also scheduled a visit to a beet sugar processing plant.

Robert R. McCormick, publisher of the Chicago Tribune, was a dinner guest of Willkie last night.

McCormick was asked:

"Does your visit mean that your paper will support Willkie?"

"Of course it does," the publisher replied.

Guard For Confessed Slayer

CHICAGO, July 9 (INS)—Fearing their prisoner might attempt suicide, police today kept a careful watch over a 26-year-old saloon porter who incessantly babbled, "there's blood on my hands," after he allegedly confessed brutally slaying 8-year-old Mazie Smith.

The girl's cruelly beaten body was found early today stuffed behind the heating plant of a near North Side building, a block from the child's home.

Powerfully-built Robert Schroeder, who assisted a crowd of neighbors and police in searching for the girl, missing since early evening, five hours after discovery of the body signed a confession which said:

"I went crazy. I went to the basement to takea shower. there was a girl—justa tiny, little girl. I hit her with a fawcet lying on the table. I dragged her body toward the boiler.

"I saw a shaker bar—one of those heavy iron bars about three feet long. I hit her with that—hit her again—and again. I hid her body. There was blood on my trousers and hands—I couldn't wash it off. I kept thinking I could still see blood on my hand."

At the inquest late today, as Schroeder was led into the room, he was attacker by Philip Smith, an uncle, who landed a blow on Schroeder's chin, and E. F. Van Kessel, Philip's employer, whose assault was thrwarted by police.

A physician who examined Mazie's battered body said the child apparently was not criminally assaulted, it was revealed at the inquest.

Rate Cut Plan Of Boston Edison

Cuts in rates for customers of the Boston Edison Co. were indicated today.

Chairman Joseph B. Cotton of the State Public Utilities Commission announced that commission accounutants had completed preliminary investigation of the company's rate structure.

At the end of a conerence between company officials and the commission, it was intimated the company would probably submit a lower rate schedule Tuesday.

Sub Tender Falcon's Damage is Probed

PORTSMOUTH, N .H., July 19—Circumstances surrounding the dameging of the submarine tender Falcon, with expected delay of diving tests by submarines off this port, will be studied by a naval board of investigation, it was announced today.

The Falson had spent Tuesday in diving tests off the Isle of Shoals and was returning to port in darkness and fog when it went aground on a reef off Fort Point light. Tugs brought the ship to the yard and examination revealed the rudder damaged.

Col. Wingate Named Army Quartermaster

Lieut. Col. Henry A. Wingate of Auburn, Me., senior instructor at the state rifle range there, reported in Boston today for appointment as quartermaster of the First Corps Area.

According to press dispatches Wingate was hurriedly recalled to Boston. Col. Mark L. Ireland, present first corps quartermaster at the Boston Army base, will become quartermaster of the first army of the United States, officers here believed.

N. Y. DOCTOR HELD IN DEATH OF BOY AT CONNECTICUT CAMP

LAKEVILLE, Ct., July 19 (AP)—State Police Lieut. F. W. Brandt sai dthat the director and physician of Camp Sloan, recreational resort maintained here by the Y. M. C. A. of Westchester and Putnam Counties, N. Y., were under arrest on charges of violating the state law on medical practice.

The arrests, Brandt said, followed an investigation of the death by blood poisoning of George H. Winterich, 11-year-old son of John T. Winterich of Ossining, N. Y., editor of the American Legion Monthly.

Dr. S. Oscar Fry, 43, of New York City, was arrested for practicing medicine in Connecticut without a state license, Brandt said, and Ernest P. Roberts, 47, of White Plains, N. Y., the director, was charged with aiding and abetting such practice. They were released in bonds of $500 each.

Aged Music Lover Loses Life Battle

Death today was victor in a 15-day battle for life by 94-year-old Miss Serena F. Perry of Pinckney st., Beacon Hill, run down by an automobile in Embankment rd. as she walked to an Esplanade concert.

The elderly spinster was taken to Massachusetts General Hospital where she regained consciousness but failed to rally from critical injuries.

NOW MAMA'S HIDDEN ROBERT'S CLOTHES!

Just why 10-year-old Robert Goodridge of Poplar st., Chelsea, insists on going to Providence remains a mystery, but if he succeeds in going there again it will provide a sensation.

All residents of the Rhode Island capital were warned in advance that the next time Robert favors them with a visit he will appear strictly in the nude.

This admonition came today from his mother, who has hidden the youthful wanderer's clothes to keep him at home, or at least away from his beloved Providence.

Two days ago he was taken in tow by police in Boston, told them he came from Providence and had ridden here on the rear tire of a car to see the races at Suffolk Downs. They soon learned his correct identity and returned him home.

He had better luck yesterday, however, when he convinced another Boston policeman in Park sq. that his home was in Providence. The officer put him on a bus to that city, but when he alighted a more skeptical policeman sent him home once again to Chelsea.

HITLER'S FINAL OFFER

with a feeling of relief that at last the tension of the past fortnight was to be relieved.

After tonight, it was generally felt, every German will know what is in the cards next.

Specifically, the Reichstag was called into session to hear a government declaration on the European wor. The German radio said it will last about an hour and 15 minutes.

TERSE REICHSTAG ORDER

All German radio stations were ordered to broadcast the proceedings.

Announcement of the Reichstag sessioin followed closely the arrival of the Italian foreign minister, Count Galeazzo Ciano, indicating axis collaboration in the German declaration. The National Socialist (Nazi) party was ordered to provide facilities for everyone to listen to the broadcast.

As forecast by Virginio Gayda, Fascist editor, last Tuesday, frequently known as Mussolini's mouthpiece, Hitler is expected to tell Britain that she must submit to axis demands or face a "grim and terrible" assault on the island kingdom.

The official announcement of the session read:

"The president of the German Reichstag announces:

The German Reichstag meets tonight at 7 p. m. Reception of a declaration by the Reich's government constitutes the order of business. Session will be broadcast over all German stations."

In early afternoon crowds gathered before the chancellery, attracted by the display of Hitler's flag, indicating his presence in Berlin.

Britain Strengthens Gibraltar Forces

MADRID, Spain, July 19 (AP)—An Algeciras dispatch by Cifra, Spanish news agency, said today that three British transports, arriving at Gibraltar from the Atlantic, had landed 1600 troops with full equipment while 1700 more remained aboard.

Boston Socialites, War Service Over, Tell of Nazi Horror

Led by the Boston socialite, Frederick Prince, 3d, New England members of the American Field Service in France, were back home today after packing a lifetime of horror into their young lives.

Gone, it seemed, was the mantle of adventure which had led them away from comfortable and luxurious homes to lend a humanitarian hand in the conflict.

Sternly serious, indignant and somewhat bewildered over the sight of blood which they had seen spilled, they related stories of treachery, of bombings of women and children, but above all, of Nazi power and of a weakened France.

OTHER BOSTONIANS

The Bostonians, along with other ambulance drivers, fled from a troubled Europe on the liner Manhattan which docked at New York.

The Manhattan, carrying 700 passengers from Lisbon, Portugal, was the last ship sent by the State Department to remove Americans from Europe's danger zones.

Besides Prince, 19-year-old grandson of Frederick H. Prince, financier, other Greater Bostonians included Albert C. Burrage 3d, of Ipswich; William G. Nickerson, son of Mrs. W. G. Nickerson, of Dedham, and Charles L. Stafford of Putnam rd., Lowell.

Another arrival was Henry Copley Greene, 68, of Cambridge, to whom Mayor Tobin recently extended an indefinite leave as secretary of the Boston Art Commission. Green was assigned by the French Red Cross to work among the nation's war evacuees.

REFUGEES GUNNED

Burrage, son of Albert C. Burrage of Hereford st, Back Bay, an ambulance driver, told of fifth column activity.

"One man who had been in the French army more than seven years was caught after he had set fire to 17 army planes at Beauvais while I was stationed there," he said.

"During bombing raids, fifth columnists sent up flares and balloons to help enemy planes. A girl I knew in Beauvais was shot for signaling at night."

FREDERICK PRINCE, 3D

Prince, who had lost both his father and his uncle, Norman Prince, during the World War in which they fought with the Lafayette Escadrille, had been in charge of one American field unit.

The young socialite, who aided refugees during the French retreat into the south of France, said:

"Near Etampes the refugee column in which we were moving was bombed three times and machine gunned by German planes nine times."

S. F. Engs, 2d, of Darien, Ct., Hamilton College graduate, described as "pitiful" the attempt of the French using antiquated planes in many instances, to combat the superior air service of the Nazis.

"Americans had better wake up over here or we'll be in the same fix France was," he said.

ITALIAN RAIDS ON GIBRALTAR

ROME, July 19 (AP)—The Italian high command stated today that one of its formations made a flight of more than 2000 miles to bomb the British military and naval base of Gibraltar yesterday, where the arsenal and other military objectives were said to have been bombed "effectively."

Reports from Gibraltar yesterday said a bombardment by unidentified aircraft had taken three lives. Reports from La Linea, Spain, said seven were killed.--Editor's note.

CLAIM SUB SUNK

Gibraltar is about 1000 miles from Rome. The communique said the flight was carried out "in spite of unfavorable weather conditions."

The communique also claimed sinking of a British submarine in the eastern Mediterranean and an aerial attack on a British tanker.

Stefani, official Italian news agency, reported that the 42,100-ton British battle cruiser Hood and the aircraft carrier Ark Royal were undergoing repairs at the bombed arsenal at Gibraltar.

The agency said there were four raids, two in the morning and two in the afternoon; that considerable damage was done, and that high columnsof smoke and flames were seen riding from the arsenal.

BLOCKADE TIGHTENED

Stefani earlier had reported tightening of the Italian air blockade of the British Mediterranean island naval base of Malta with need of supplies there growing.

The agency, citing the bombing of a 15,000-ton oil tanker headed for Malta as an indication of the blockade's effectiveness, said Italian planes had been hammering at the island and scouring the sea to prevent tankers and supply ships from reaching the island.

N. Y. Bomb Scare 'Childish Prank'

NEW YORK, June 19 (AP)—Acting Lieut. James A. Pyke, bomb squad head, dismissed today as "a childish prank" an explosion on the Fifth ave. side of Central Park yesterday afternoon.

The blast, apparently, was caused by flashlight powder packed into a small metal container and brought hundreds of persons to the scene. No one was injured.

WEAK LEADERS BEAT FRANCE

I knew this officer intimately.

"We have a chance if the Germans attack this fall," he said. "But if we go through the winter without fighting, I'm afraid we shall be sunk."

He smiled at my amazement.

"You see," he explained, "we must have a shock very soon. There are several reasons. First we need a shock before we can get rid of our useless generals. We have more than 400 generals in the army and most of them including M. Gamelin—have passed their usefulness. We are a tradition-bound institution and we shan't be able to get rid of them until we have had a disaster.

"The nation needs a jolt too. If we are hit now we perhaps can galvanize our national effort in time. But if we stand still through the winter the old dissensions will continue until it is too late. Furthermore, our troops won't be ready to fight.

"Our soldiers are magnificent. But I know my countrymen. If they don't have action quickly, they won't be much good by spring."

I asked what was wrong with Gamelin.

"Gen. Gamelin is just not cut out for commander-in-chief in war time," he said. "He lacks energy and imagination. He doesn't know what modern warfare is. He is far too timid and will hesitate at decisions which mean a cost of life. He isa tired man, a weak man."

He paused, then said:

Gen. Giraud is the man. There is a general. Politics have kept him back, but when the shock comes, he will be called. Huntziger, Weygand and possibly George or Pretelat are other possibilities. But Gamelin and the other dodos will have to go, or we are lost."

How correct my friend's prophecy proved! I heard the same thing many times. And especially I heard the name of Giraud, from one end of the army to the other.

EVENTS RECALLED

But you will recall what happened. The great Gen. Giraud was kept in command of the seventh army up on the channel until the offensive started. He led his troops into Belgium at dawn on May 10. Then the disaster came at Sedan. The ninth army was broken and the German; poured across the Meuse.

Giraud at that desperate hour was called out of Belgium and given command of the group of armies which was to try to bring order out of chaos. Too late, too late.

The gallant general gambled his life like a common soldier to try to save the impossible situation. He raged along the front in a tank to rally his forces, personally view conditions and virtually attempt to stem the enemy advance with his own hands. He was captured in almost the same place he wastaken prisoner in the Battle of Guise in 1914.

I spent three days at General Giraud's headquarters in St Omer in February and I found him to be one of the few senior officers who looked on the situation with fearless, discerning eyes.

His cry was for machines and more machines and national discipline. He did not suffer from the Maginot Line opiate which seemed to keep so many of the high command in a dream world. He told me that time;

"The Germany of today is far more dangerous than the Germany of 1914. Unfortunately our nation and the world generally do not seem to realize it. But we will learn when the terrible test comes. And England will learn. And I think you in America will learn before it is all over.

"I do not think France will be defeated. But it will be a long and terrible war before we can win. I repeat—long and terrible."

I had the general's permission to cable this interview at the time, but the censors killed it. The censors hated truth that was even mildly unpaltable.

Could France have won, had men of Giraud's type been placed in command at the start? She might have, had they been able to awaken the nation in time.

But that awakening, which didn't come, was the first requisite to victory, for France was like a man asleep or under the influence of drugs. Her fall was the result of the leaders. The troops and the people were brave, but the collapse came at the top. The Girauds and Re; nauds might have saved the day, had they been called in time.

his fate cheerfully in the hands of the American people in his venture to shatter all American tradition by winning three successive terms in the White House. In accepting the unprecedented renomination, Roosevelt said.

"My conscience will not let me turn my back upon a call to service.

"The right to make that call rests with the people through the American method of a free election. Only the people themselves can draft a President. If such a draft should be made upon me, I say, in the utmost simplicity, I will, with God's help, continue to serve with the best of my ability and with the fullness of my strength."

EXPLAINS HIS SILENCE

As for his reasons in keeping silent on his third term plans for so many months, Mr. Roosevelt said:

"When the conflict first broke out last September, it was still my intention to announce clearly and simply, at an early date, that under no conditions would I accept re-election. This fact was well known to my friends and I think was understood by many citizens.

"It soon became evident, however, that such a public statement on my part would be unwise from the point of view of sheer public interest."

The intra-party warfare will continue, with the President's New Deal cohorts "cleaning house" in the Democratic national committee within the next few weeks. Democratic National Chairman James A. Farley already has sung his swan song and is being replaced by a more ardent New Dealer.

Some of the greatest figures in the Democratic party opposed the choice of Wallace. Speaker William B. Bankhead actively campaigned against him. So too did Farley. Senator Carter Glass, the Virginian dean of the Senate, voted against him.

McNUTT STAMPEDE NEAR

The names of Security Administrator Jesse H. Jones, of Senators Alva B. Adams, Scott Lucas, Prentiss M. Brown and Joseph O'Mahoney were entered against him. McNutt, Jones and Lucas staged desperate campaigns to keep their followers from bolting Wallace.

Indeed McNutt appeared to be the convention's favorite for F. D. R.'s running-mate.

On the roll call, and only one was taken, the unofficial results were:

Wallace, 627 7-10; Bankhead, 328 2-3; McNutt, 66 19-30, with Farney, Jones, Adams, O'Mahoney, Lucas, Brown, Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson and Bascomb Timmons, Texas newspaperman, getting scattered support.

Only 10 of the delegations voted solidly for Wallace. Of the rest, six states—Alabama, Arizona, Georgia, Louisiana, Virginia and Texas—voted solidly for Bankhead and two states and one territory—Idaho, Oklahoma and the Philippine Islands—voted solidly for McNutt.

BIG STATES PASS

For a little while, the New Deal was not at all certain of winning on the first ballot. Some of the big delegations—like Indiana, Massachusetts, Michigan and Ohio passed when first called. After the call was completed, they reported and gave Wallace 135 votes, the Massachusetts delegation bringing his total to within one vote of nomination and the Michigan delegation sending him over the top.

McNutt, Senator David I. Walsh of Massachusetts and Brown harangued their delegations to beat them into line.

The revolt against Wallace was far more noticeable during the nominating speeches. At times, it reached disorderly proportions and Permanent Chairman Alben W. Barkeley begged for order.

The demonstrations frightened the New Deal managers. They sent Phillip Murray, CIO leader; House leader Sam Rayburn, Jesse Jones, Lucas and others to the platform to praise the President's choice.

But at long last, the New Deal did it—but with the aid of some of its outstanding critics, who could not stand for a public repudiation of the President, once he committed himself to Wallace. But the New Deal fear was so great that they called on the First Lady of the land, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, to pacify the rebels.

F. D. MAKES SLIP

She made them a nice little speech, pleading for unity, abandonment of partisanship and support of the New Deal. A lot of people credit her with giving Wallace the winning edge.

The President himself did little to sooth the injured feelings of the rebels.

He made one slip of the tongue that will be carried into the coming campaign. It was to congratulate the convention on its "choice of Henry A. Wallace for the high office of President." The Republicans plan to make that their campaign—to attack Wallace on the ground he soon will become President, if the Democratic ticket is elected.

It was the complaint of the rebels too—that Roosevelt proposes to retire, soon after the election, and let Wallace run the government and they wanted an old-fashioned Democrat for that job.

REPUBLICAN POW-WOW—With the third term nomination of President Roosevelt now an accomplished fact, the Republican party's board of strategy holds a pow-wow in New York headquarters . . . to discuss effects of the Democratic action on G. O. P. campaign plans. They are (l. to r.) Jane Todd, Chairman Joseph Martin of North Attleboro, Mrs. Ruth Pratt (standing), Samuel E. Pryor, Jr., J. Russell Sprague, Edward F. Jaeckle and Henry B. Fletcher.

F. D. SPEECH SOOTHES CONVENTION'S ANGER

circus lion, stood up, pivoting and dreaming on his feet.

". . . I have often lain awake at night asking myself whether, as the commander and chief of the army and navy, I had the right to ask others to serve, if I, too, was not ready to serve my country . . ."

PRAISE FOR WALLACE

Henry A. Wallace freshly nominated to team with Roosevelt on the party's ticket hunched down, half hidden on a aisle seat, combing his towseled hair with long fingers.

"As my good wife told you earlier this evening, this is largely your fight. In times like these I can never be more than a few hours away from my desk . . .

"I am particularly grateful to you delegates for the nomination of Henry Wallace. He has been of immeasurable assistance to me."

So it went—the report of the progress of defense plans, a word of appreciation to favorite aides.

". . . And especially I want to thank the man whom I affectionately call my good friend Jim—James Farley . . ."

A brief trickle of handclaps which died quickly.

". . . No man has served the nation and his party with greater zeal and unselfishness . . ."

Farley bowed his glistening head, knowing, no doubt, that the persuasive voice would soon be importuning him to stay on a few more months and manage the Democratic campaign as a "loyal soldier of the cause."

For Barkley had let it be known that a movement was being started inside the party, at the President's behest, to "draft Jim for the duration of the battle."

"Why not" Barkley had beamed, "we drafted Roosevelt didn't we?"

OPPORTUNE SPEECH

It was an opportune speech at just the proper psychological moment to restore the conventioners' nerves and send them home with a feeling of unity.

For factional jealousies and inter-state distrusts flared, the delegates openly flouting all Chairman Barkley's almost tearful appeals for order.

The convention, a trifle resentfully, finally accepted Wallace, at presidential dictation. But not without frequent exchanges of bitter shouts and an occasional flat fight on the floor.

In the end, the convention concluded happily for one and all with Franklin Roosevelt giving everybody a spiritual bath with his unctuous voice and plausible explanation of his long silence.

And the delegations disbanded with the spell still in their ears.

Mrs. Compton Must Stay in Hospital

GARDNER, July 19—Although alienists contend she has been sane for the past 18 months, Mrs Ruth E. Compton of Watertown will remain in Gardner State Hospital for the present, it was announced today.

The former South Boston schoolteacher was freed Wednesday of charges she murdered her mother seven years ago. She was insane at the time of the tragedy, the court ruled.

PALFREY DIVORCE ASSURED

RENO, Nev., July 19—Sarah Palfrey Fabyan's suit for divorce from Marshall Fabyan, Jr., met with no return in the divorce courthere today, the tennis star's attorey announced.

The match was ended by Marshall's default.

In other words, Sarah can claim a love set—in the tennis sense of "love"—because she expected to obtain the divorcepapers by nightfall.

The Boston star filed suit on June 8 but her husband, prominent Hub socialite and architect, failed to file an answer to Sarah's charges of cruelty.

Mrs. Fabyan seeks the right to resume her maiden name of Palfrey. The couple were married October 6, 1934, at Sharon, Mass.

In society and sports circles, her name has been linked recently with that of Elwood Cook, a ranking U. S. star and former member of the Davis Cup team.

Disregard of Ism Threat Ires Writer

By ELSIE ROBINSON
Famous Magazine Writer and Author

CHICAGO, July 19—ATTENTION AMERICAN PARENTS! Listen to this — Millions for munitions. Millions for relief. Millions to aid European refugees. But not one nickel to safeguard young American ideals—or to protect our children against the certain poison of foreign ism's.

That's the situation as we go to press—and it's evidently jake with the Democratic delegates. For though they touched on every other problem in their resolutions from hog cholera and peach blight to the divine right of a free people to own "falling water"—nary a word did they say about the need to safeguard your youngsters and mine against mental and spiritual demoralization.

THE "FORGOTTEN MEN" OF 1940 ARE NO LONGER VOTING ADULTS. NO, INDEEDY! THEY ARE THE YOUNGSTERS WHOSE IMPRESSIONABLE MINDS MUST GUIDE THIS LAND TOMORROW AND WHO ARE, AT PRESENT, LEFT TO THE MERCY OF OLD WORLD HEELS AND HOODLUMS AND THEIR TRAITOROUS SUGGESTIONS.

GENE TUNNEY MAD

A nice mess! And one which does no credit whatever to the gentlemen who assembled in solemn conclave. Something, plainly, should be done about it

And 'Gene Tunney would like to be the lad to do it. Yes, Gene's here—and Gene's mad. Boiling mad at the dirty, two-timing deal handed the kids.

For years, Gene has been devoting his warm heart and outsize wallop to the defense of young America. Trying to make us see the increasingly vicious influence of Communism, Fascism and Nazism on our future citizens.

Showing up the communistic element in the Youth Congress and its far flung ramifications. Asking everyone to do something about it. Presenting a resolution at the recent Republican convention, and getting laughed at for his pains though blessed by those who appreciate the big battle he's putting up.

NEED LEGISLATION

"But it's no use just lecturing, warning and pleading," says "the champ." "We have got to get to the root of things. At present we are in the absurd situation of legally permitting Communism—then fighting against it.

"What America needs is a law which will outlaw all foreign ism's . . . prevent them from getting any start. No, it wouldn't imply a constitutional amendment . . . nor any change which isn't easily within our reach.

"A simple law—such as we pass any day to abolish other pests—would keep Stalin's and Hitler's hirelings from destroying young America's loyalty—THAT LOYALTY WHICH IS OUR ONLY SURE PROTECTION AGAINST INTERNAL AND EXTERNAL DESTRUCTION."

A LAW TO SAVE THE CHILDREN OF AMERICA—that doesn't seem an unreasonable demand. Yet try and put it across! Messrs. Hitler, Stalin and Mussolini have endless statutes to regulate young Nazis, Communists and Fascists.

Only America lags and laughs . . . only American parents fatuously believe that "nothing can happen."

ALL DOOMED UNLESS

But Gene Tunney knows that something can happen . . . that something is happening . . . and that we're all doomed unless we stop that happening.

"Journalistic hysteria?"— All right, have it your own way. Go on kidding yourself, if you wish. But I've seen what I've seen, flaunting its vicious arrogance at the American way of life . . . Blasting American standards . . . Booing America's President.

AND I'M GOING TO FIGHT WITH 'GENE TUNNEY!

JOAN CRAWFORD GOT FILM START IN BEAUTY CONTEST

A wealth of precedent, girls, lies behind the annual hunt for Miss America.

The contest, of which the search for Miss Massachusetts 1940 is a part, served as a stepping stone for the career of Joan Crawford. Dorothy Lamour likewise got her start that way.

You, Miss Unnoticed, may be Miss Massachusetts 1940, and ultimately Miss America.

Responding to the call for pulchritude, girls from many cities and towns in the state already have entered the contest.

The entries have come from Boston, Brookline, Watertown, Salisbury Beach, Lawrence, Holyoke and Everett. And now is YOUR opportunity to read the rules of the contest and fill out the accompanying entry blank.

For fame and fortune may await the girl whose beauty, talent and poise qualifies her as state winner. And mere beauty alone is not sufficient. Intelligence, musical or dramatic ability, skill as a dancer, and other qualities are essential for the coveted honor.

Other winners of this most popular of all beauty contests have made good, in a big way, on screen and stage anad in other professional lines. They have made their beauty pay dividends in wealth and in fame. And if you possess the required qualities, the same fortune beckons you.

The contest for "Miss Massachusetts 1940" is sponsored by the Boston Daily Record, Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser. The winner will be furnished free transportation by the newspapers to Atlantic City and a complete wardrobe suitable for a week of thrilling vacation activities at the gay seaside resort. Meals and accommodations at a first-class hotel will also be provided.

An alluring evening gown and a smart bathing suit are included in the wardrobe. And if "Miss Massachusetts 1940" is selected for the national title, there will be screen tests by filmdom's leading scout talents, some $2500 in contracts, and other opportunities.

National finals will be held at Atlantic City from Sept. 2 to Sept 8, and gay and elaborate plans are already afoot for the pageant.

The contest here is open to any Massachusetts girl who is an American citizen of the white race between the ages of 18 and 28, and who never has been married.

Fill out the accompanying blank NOW and read the complete list of contest rules accompanying this announcement. This is your opportunity to collect golden dividends on your beauty and talent.

A winner of a Worcester beauty contest last year, June A. Perreault today has entered the Miss Massachusetts contest sponsored by the Boston American, Record and Sunday Advertiser. A pretty blonde, she lives on Beaconsfield rd., Worcester.

Japan's New Regime Asks U. S. Friendship

TOKYO, July 19 (AP)—Japan under her new totalitarian-type government will remain friendly with the United States but will not lean over backward to improve this friendship, it appeared today.

The foreign office spokesman, Yakichiro Suma, told a press conference that Japan's desire for friendship with the United States would not be decreased even though the new government under Prince Fumimaro Konoye strengthens relations with Germany and Italy.

"Politics are not maintained by mathematical formula," he said. "We are friendly with all nations. We have been the party wanting better relations with the United States.

"We already have our cards on the table and have been waiting for six months for an American move."

CLOSER TO THE AXIS

The Japanese press expects an end of what it describes as Japan's "diplomatic subservience" to both the United States and Great Britain coupled with a closer move toward the Rome-Berlin axis. No immediate alliance with the axis is expected, however.

Prince Konoye and his foreign minister, Yosuke Matsuoka, generally are described as believing the present time inappropriate for outright alignment with Germany and Italy and that instead Japan should proceed speedily toward stabilization of East Asia and establishment of a "self-sufficient economic system."

These and other questions were set for discussion at today's first meeting of the new four-man inner cabinet, consisting of Prince Konoye, Matsuoka, War Minister Lieut. Gen. Eiki Tojo and Navy Minister Vice Admiral Zengo Yoshida.

TO NAME CABINET

Prince Konoye was to name a full cabinet later to complete the government he is forming in succession to that of Admiral Yonai, which resigned this week.

Suma at his press conference declined comment on the renomination of President Roosevelt.

"Our interest," he said, "lies in the fundamental basis of American foreign policy, and not in the president as a man. All we want is a fair deal."

ASK FREE HAND

Simultaneously Suma implied that Japan would insist upon a free hand in settlement of the three-year-old war in China. Commenting on British Prime Minister Churchill's remarks in Parliament yesterday suggesting that the war might be mediated later, Suma said.

"At this moment we are not welcoming offers of good offices of third parties."

He said Japan was not contemplating inviting such mediation as suggested by Churchill and no conversations to this end were under way.

Jack Holt Heroic In Keith Boston Melodrama

Jack Holt goes heroic once more in his own rugged jackholtish way in "Passport to Alcatraz," melodrama that opened at the RKO Boston yesterday and tickled all the Holt fans. Another first-run attraction at the big RKO house is "Dr. Christian Meets the Women," which is indeed entertainment of a quite different order, with Jean Hersholt as the good doctor for the third time.

Always brave and dauntless, Jack Holt smashes a sabotage ring in "Passport to Alcatraz" and incidentally his assistant, Noah Beery, Jr., captures the ring's feminine lure, portrayed by a pert little newcomer named Cecilia Cellejo. C. Henry Gordon appears as the slick stooge for the phony magnate and socialite played by Clay Clement. Detective Beery soon discovers that the girl is just an innocent victim.

But the Holt followers are the ones who will get the biggest kick out of this spy ring thriller. The comedy is contributed by big Maxie Rosenbloom as the dumb ringster.

In "Dr. Christian Meets the Women," the popular River's End medico routs a fake diet gang headed by dapper Rod LaRocque. The pills and squills hero now monopolizing Mr. Hersholt's time and talent takes everything in stride, including the emergency blood transfusion and the various run-ins with the diet faker.

Frank Albertson and Marilyn Merrick do the sweet romancing, Boston's shapely Veda Ann Borg, the physical culture demonstrating. Dorothy Lovett appears as Doc Christian's cute nurse and Edgar Kennedy turns on the laughs as the husband who has no use for city slickers and diet experts.

Film Honors To Tamiroff

By DON WARD

Akim Tamiroff has perhaps his most ambitious role yet in "The Way of All Flesh," which is now on Paramount and Fenway screens and which the older film fans will remember as the silent melodrama that gave great Emil Jannings one of his triumphs back in the '20s as the poor fellow who goes wrong and has his hell on earth.

The story, which is intended to wring all hearts, was more gripping years ago than it is today. There were many old-time plays in which the wretched hero goes to pieces as he comes back to his former home and peeks through the window. Theaters were often flooded with tears in auld lang syne. It is somewhat different in this jitterbug era and the chances are that no sponges will be needed at the Paramount and Fenway.

The bank cashier is taken for a ride and is listed as dead when they find his watch and chain on a gangster killed by a train. Then the victim of sharpers and the blonde darling played by Muriel Angelus begins his weary pilgrimage, pausing now and then to get sad glimpses of his dear ones, especially the son who plays the violin, a la Kreisler.

Gladys George and William Henry are featured players, along with Miss Angelus, but the high-spots are touched by Tamiroff.

"Lucky Cisco Kid," which is also at the twin theaters, is as good as anything so far offered in this popular series, being light, snappy and red-blooded entertainment, free from Old World banalities.

Cesar Romero is again the romantic, nimble-witted hero and Chris-Pin Martin his roguish Sancho Panzo. Mary Beth Hughes and Evelyn Venable are the ladies who keep the gay caballeros dancing attendance.

'Irene' Headlines Bowdoin Program

Anna Neagle, beautiful British screen star, is doubling on two local screens. Starring in the just released "Queen of Destiny" on Keith-Memorial screen, she may also be seen through Tuesday at the Bowdoin Square Theater in "Irene," filmusical.

BETTE DAVIS who stars in "All This, and Heaven Too," now at the Metropolitan.

Hollywood Paragraphs

—By LOUELLA O. PARSONS—

HOLLYWOOD, July 19—What a surprise! William Dieterle, who has directed many of Warner's best pictures, among them the Academy winning "The Life of Emile Zola," "The Story of Louis Pasteur," "Juarez," "Dr. Erhlich's Magic Bullet" and others, today asked for and obtained his release from Warners.

Dieterle has just finished "The Man from Fleet Street" and although his contract had a year to run he asked Jack Warner for his freedom. He has created a unique position in Hollywood by making boxoffice successes of biological and sociological pictures but he feels he has made enough and his grievance against Warners was that he did not want to be typed. His contract ends officially July 26—exactly ten years to the day he joined Warner Brothers.

No one can ever accuse Kay Kyser of professional jealousy. He came over to the table at Victor Hugo's and launched a most enthusiastic tribute to Matty Malneck and his orchestra.

"He is so original," said Kyser. "And I give him credit for not copying the other orchestra leaders."

Kay is here to make a picture for RKO. After the success of "That's Right You're Wrong"—and I can vouch it was plenty successful for it played in many towns where we were on our personal appearance tour—RKO is really going to town on "You'll Find Out," the next Kyser opus.

'New Moon' Sail Tonight

Tonight is "New Moon"-Light Sail Night aboard the S. S. Steel Pier, according to an announcement by the Cape Cod Steamship Company, as a tribute to both Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy, screen stars, currently appearing in "New Moon," at Loew's State and Orpheum theaters.

Another important feature of tonight's sail will be the distribution of guest theater tickets to all couples, providing the young man is blonde and the young lady titian haired, and the couple nearest resembling both Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy will each receive a month's courtesy tickets to either the State or Orpheum theater.

Several of the hit tunes from the film will be played during the evening by the ship's orchestra.

American Flag Film At South Station

"The Flag Speaks," South Station Theater's currently featured film short, is attracting record attendances. It gives the history of the Star Spangled Banner. On the same bill are an "Information Please" short, with Ruth Gordon, stage and screen star, as guest of radio's famed brain-trust; a Popeye cartoon, Panama Canal and Curacao travelogues, a golf instruction short featuring Sam Snead and the latest newsreels.

Drug Film In Last Showings

But three days remain in which to see "Reefer Madness," film expose of the marihuana drug evil which has been showing on the Globe screen for the past five weeks.

"Reefer Madness" purports to show the depravity and despair that follow in the wake of marihuana's use, a vice which has become widespread in the opinion of the country's narcotic agents.

Featured in the straight-from-the-shoulder film are Lillian Miles, Dave O'Brien, Dorothy Short, Kenneth Craig, Mary McLaren, Thelma White, Carleton Young and Pat Royale.

This film is also showing on Beacon screen.

JEANETTE MACDONALD, EDDY SUPERB IN 'NEW MOON' HIT

Romance of Old Abounds in Film

By PEGGY DOYLE

There's nothing oblique about Nelson Eddy's wooing of Jeanette MacDonald in "New Moon," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's pretentious vehicle—a veritable coach and 40—for its singing sweethearts.

If you've been paying attention, you've noticed James Cagney's cagey indifference towards Girl Friend Ann Sheridan in "Torrid Zone," and Bob Hope's wisecracking way with that fascinating maid Paulette Goddard, in "The Ghost Breakers." When Richard Greene whammied Zorina on the jaw in "I Was An Adventurer," it was the dawn of love. And Charles Boyer and Bette Davis, in the current Met attraction, "All This, and Heaven Too," never once mentioned their abiding love for each other.

This new technique in screen love-making is known, as we have indicated, as the "oblique approach" and is probably what started that Latins are lousy lovers rumor.

No matter, in "New Moon," which had Grace Moore and Lawrence Tibbett that way — cinematically speaking, of course, 10 years ago—the love-making is of the knee-bending, hand-on-heart, heaving variety. Eddy, reigning prince charming of the country's concert stages, has come out of the glacier and gives a better than usual portrayal of a man in love. He sings such familiar melodies as "One Kiss," "Wanting You" and "Lover, Come Back to Me" as if he means every syllable, which is all to the good, since all his really fine voice ever needed was warmth and feeling.

Miss MacDonald, who never looked lovelier than in the superlatively feminine frills and furbelows of the picture's 18th century, is not up to her acting best. She's a little too coy and precious, particularly since she had become a shipwrecked castaway on an isolated island along with other ship passengers and was forced to earn her groceries milking the community goats.

But when she is singing all is forgiven, for her voice is not only enchanting but she looks enchanting even when she is lifting it in the upper register.

The story starts in 1780 aboard a ship New Moon Orleans-bound from France. The rolling sea cases Jeanette right into Nelson's waiting arms. She is a Parisian belle, on her way to the New World to claim an estate inherited from an uncle, and she mistakes him for a ship's officer. Actually, he is a duke who has escaped the guillotine as a political enemy of the king by posing as a bondsman to be sold into slavery. Later, Jeanette's plantation manager purchases Nelson as a servant and the proud Jeanette, annoyed with herself that she has fallen in love with an underling, ruthlessly orders him about.

At long last, the lady discovers the singing bondsman's identity and love apparently goes on forever. The story is overburdened with incidents and is in itself synthetic, which is unfortunate because of the production's previously indicated superior qualities, most notable of which are Sigmund Romberg's six hummable tunes.

Anna Neagle's Victoria Colorful

By PEGGY DOYLE

"Sixty Glorious Years" was the original title of Keith-Memorial's current screen attraction—"Queen of Destiny"—and it will do to describe Herbert Wilcox' brilliantly technicolored throwback to an era that will never be again.

Helen Hayes' unforgettable "Victoria Regina," probably her greatest portrayal, recaptured its grandeur, quaintness and romance for theater audiences throughout the country. Later, England's lovely Anna Neagle charmed new-found American movie fans in the celluloid version, Herbert Wilcox' handsome production, "Victoria the Great."

"Queen of Destiny," companion piece to the latter picture, is rather in the nature of a thrice-told tale to those who know the previous Victorian reincarnations but its contrast to the England of today gives it tremendous dramatic impact.

Recalled from circulation two years ago after having been released in only one New York theater, Radio City Music Hall, because it followed too closely "Victoria the Great," which had a similar theme, current events now give it a vitality and significance it previously lacked as an historical document.

Again, Miss Neagle is playing the great queen whose world-rocking reign spanned more than a half century and whose spats with her consort, Prince Albert of Saxe-Coburg, provided gossip for factories all over the globe.

After her somber Nurse Edith Cavell and her sparkling Irene her Victoria comes as another manifestation of Miss Neagle's many-faceted talent. She gives warmth and charm to the role of the greatest autocrat of generations of breakfast-tables, vital symbol of a period of pomp and circumstance that has indeed gone with the wind.

Her Albert, played by Anton Walbrook, who succeeded Vincent Price as Miss Hayes' second-season prince consort, is one of the nicest things about the production. His tender tolerance for the sometimes spitfire-ish sovereign, who did not always remember to leave her crown in the ante-chamber, is delightfully appealing. Somehow, though, he never achieves the sturdy-oak quality inseparable from the stage interpretation.

C. Aubrey Smith's Duke of Wellington is excellent. Other splendid performances are given by Walter Rilla, Charles Carson, Greta Wegener, Felix Aylmer and Gordon McLeod, all remembered from "Victoria the Great."

FULL TEXT OF ROOSEVELT 3D TERM ACCEPTANCE SPEECH

Cites Peril to America In War-Stricken Europe

The Evening American presents herewith the complete text of President Roosevelt's Third Term acceptance speech.

Members of the convention—my friends.

It is with a very full heart that I speak tonight. I must confess that I do so with mixed feelings—because I find myself, as almost everyone does sooner or later in his lifetime in a conflict between deep personal desire for retirement on the one hand, and that quiet insistent thing called conscience on the other.

Because there are self-appointed commentators and interpreters who will seek to misinterpret my motion motives I speak in a somewhat personal vein, and I most trust in the good faith and common sense of the American people to accept my own good faith and do the same thing each other.

When in 1936 I was chosen by the party for a second term as President it was my firm intention to leave the responsibilities of government at the end of my term. The circumstances remain unchanged.

Eight years in the Presidency, following a period of dark depression and recovering world crisis after world crisis, would make any man old before his time. Nevertheless, if the convention of my party shall determine that I am the person best qualified to lead the party in this election, I will accept the decision as the expression of your confidence in me and as a call to service.

I say this solely of the national crisis of the international scene. I do so in the reluctant conclusion that such declaration should not be made before the national convention. It was accordingly made known to them an hour after the permanent organization of the convention.

Like any other man I am complimented by the honor you have done me. But I know you will understand the spirit in which I say that no call of party alone would prevail upon me to accept election to the Presidency.

War Clouds Loomed

During the spring of 1939 world events made it clear to all but the blind or the partisan that a great war in Europe had become not merely a possibility but a probability and that such a war would of necessity deeply affect the future of this nation.

When the convention met last September it was still my intention to announce clearly and simply at an early date, that under no conditions would I accept a election. The fact was well known to my friends and I think was understood in many quarters.

It soon became evident, however, that such a public statement on my part would be unwise from the point of view of party unity and interest. As President of the United States it was my duty with the end of the Congress to preserve our own safety, to adapt our profession of defense to meet rapid changes, to keep our domestic affairs adjusted to shifting world conditions and to sustain the policy of the good neighbor.

War Prevention Duty

It was also my obvious duty to maintain to the utmost the influence of this mighty nation in our efforts to prevent the spread of war and to sustain by all legal means those governments threatened by other governments which had rejected the principles of democracy.

Swiftly moving foreign events made necessary swift action at home and beyond the seas. Plans for national defense had to be expanded and adjusted to meet new forms of warfare. American citizens and their welfare had to be safeguarded in many foreign zones of danger. National unity in the United States became a crying necessity in the face of the development of irreconcilable types of economic and international trends.

Every one that passed called for the postponement of personal plans and personal desire until the latest possible moment. The normal conditions under which I would have made public declaration of my personal desires were gone.

Having solely of the national good and of the international peace, I seem to be the reluctant conclusion that such declaration should not be made before the national convention. It was accordingly made known to them an hour after the permanent organization of the convention.

Like any other man I am complimented by the honor you have done me. But I know you will understand the spirit in which I say that no call of party alone would prevail upon me to accept election to the Presidency.

Willingness to Serve

The real decision to be made in these circumstances is not the acceptance of a nomination, but rather an ultimate willingness to serve if chosen by the electorate. Many considerations enter into this decision.

During the past few months with due congressional approval, we have been taking steps to implement the total defense of America. I cannot forget that in carrying out this program I have drafted into the service of the nation the public servants, men and women, taking them away from important private occupations, calling them suddenly from their homes and their businesses. I have asked them to leave their own work, and to contribute their skill and experience to the cause of their nation.

I, as the head of their government, have asked them to do this. Regardless of party, regardless of personal convenience, they came—they answered the call. Every single one of them, with one exception has come to Washington to serve.

Sounds Defense Note

These people, who have placed patriotism above all else, represent those who have made their way to the top of their professions or industries through proven skill and experience.

But they alone could not be enough to meet the needs of the times.

Just as a system of national defense—based on man power alone, without the mechanized equipment of modern warfare is fatally inadequate for adequate defense, so also planes and guns and tanks are wholly insufficient unless they are supplemented by the power of men trained to use them.

Such men's power consists not only of pilots and gunners and infantry and those who operate tanks but every individual in actual military service. It is necessary for adequate defense that we have now at hand at least four million trained individuals and a reserve of nine million more.

Because of the millions of citizens involved in the conduct of these defense activities, I am opposed to any form of draft which is premature or is of longer duration than is necessary for the protection of our people.

Ponders Rights

Every American is willing to bear his share of the burden of military duty. It is the effort to get the burden fall upon any one group. For a democracy and every group decides to experience upon the question as a whole.

I do not have to remind myself whether I have the right, as commander-in-chief of the Army and Navy, to call into service all women for the duration of war or to train them as nurses to serve and, at the same time, decline to serve my country in my own personal capacity. If I am called upon I will do so by the people of my country.

In times like these in times of great tension of great crisis—the compass of the word narrows to a single fact. The fact which dominates our world is the fact of armed aggression, the fact of successful armed aggression, aimed at the destruction of government, the kind of society we in the United States have chosen and established for ourselves. It is a fact which no one any longer doubts—which no one in any longer able to ignore.

It stands out ordinary war. It is a revolution imposed by force of arms, which threatens all men everywhere. It is a revolution which proposes not to set men free but to reduce them to slavery—to reduce them to slavery in the interest of a dictatorship which has already shown the nature and the extent of the advantage which it hopes to obtain.

This is the fact which dominates our world and which dominates the lives of all of us. In the face of the danger which confronts our time, no individual retains or can hope to retain, the right of personal choice which free men enjoy in times of peace. He has a first obligation to serve in the defense of our institutions of freedom a first obligation to serve his country in whatever capacity his country finds him useful.

Like most men of my age, I had made plans for myself, plans for a private life of my own choice and for my own satisfaction to begin in January, 1941. These plans, like so many other plans, had been made in a world which now seems as distant as another planet.

Call to Serve

Today all private plans, all private lives have been repealed by an overriding public danger. In the face of that public danger all those who can be of service to the republic have no choice but to offer themselves for service in those capacities for which they may be fitted.

Those are the reasons why I have had to admit to myself and now to state to you, that my conscience will not let me turn my back upon a call to service.

The right to make that call rests with the people through the American method of a free election. Only the people themselves can draft a President. If such a draft should be made upon me, I say, in the utmost simplicity, I will with God's help, continue to serve with the best of my ability and with the fullness of my strength.

To you, the delegates to this convention, I express my gratitude for the selection of Henry Wallace for the high office of Vice President of the United States. His first hand knowledge of the problems of government in every part of the nation and indeed of the whole world qualifies him to

THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY has nominated President Roosevelt for a third term, and is thus the first political party in the history of the United States to break this hitherto inviolable American tradition.

Mr. Roosevelt has accepted the nomination, and thus becomes the first American President to do so.

The convention ignored Mr. Roosevelt's disavowal of desire for a third term, and it was fully expected and probably intended by Mr. Roosevelt that it should.

Otherwise, Mr. Roosevelt would have expressed himself as President Washington did in a similar situation.

When Washington approached the end of his second term, and was being urged to continue in office, he said:

"It appears to me proper, especially as it may conduce to a more distinct expression of the public voice, that I should now apprise you of the resolution I have formed to DECLINE being considered among the number of those out of whom a choice is to be made."

Likewise, Mr. Roosevelt, if he had intended declination, should have expressed himself as President Jefferson did in the same circumstances.

WHEN JEFFERSON was urged to stand for a third term, he said:

"That I should lay down my charge at a proper period is as much a duty as to have borne it faithfully.

"If some termination to the services of the Chief Magistrate be not fixed by the Constitution, or supplied by practice, his office, nominally four years, will, in fact, become for life, and history shows how easily that DEGENERATES INTO AN INHERITANCE."

Now it must be determined if a majority of the American people will concur in the impairment of a principle which until this moment has been respected and held inviolate.

Until and unless the people DO concur, there has been no final departure from the processes which the founders of this nation deemed vital to its freedom and happiness and which, until now, have not been challenged by any custodian of authority and power democratically conferred by the American people.

This, then, is the issue.

Shall the people concur?

Shall the people now decide that what has been held invaluable for a century and half has suddenly become of no value?

Shall the people now decide that what has been considered unwise, undemocratic and un-American by all the predecessors of Mr. Roosevelt may now be done safely and patriotically?

WHY HAVE the Democratic party and Mr. Roosevelt compelled the American people to make these decisions, when no other situation or emergency or crisis in our national history has required them?

NOMINATED FOR THIRD TERM

Franklin Delano Roosevelt

Certainly it is not because no other American among our one hundred and thirty million people is qualified to be President, or capable of exercising the authority and powers of the Presidency in the best interests of the nation.

Certainly it is not because no other Democrat than Mr. Roosevelt could be safely entrusted with direction of our national affairs in these admittedly difficult times.

Who believes that Mr. Roosevelt, alone and solely among us all, is the last possessor of the attributes of mind, heart and soul essential to proper and wise supervision of our American destinies?

Who believes wisdom and vision and courage have fled from us all except Mr. Roosevelt?

Mr. Roosevelt knows it is not true.

The Democratic national convention knew it was not true.

Mr. Roosevelt was impelled by a reckless and consuming ambition to retain the vast powers and prestige of the presidency, and not by any exalted idea of his own exclusive possession of capacity.

The Democratic national convention was not a free convention of representatives of the American people, but a selfish, bossed and fettered JOBHOLDERS CONVENTION, with its roots so deep in the pocketbooks of the people that it could not rise above the sordid level of patronage and self-interest.

PERHAPS THE American people should not have expected anything better than blind, grasping and penurious politics from a convention of New Deal jobholders.

But they surely expected something better, some higher show of principle, some finer expression and example of AMERICANISM from Mr. Roosevelt.

A man twice honored by election to the presidency should have been willing and content to take his place in the revered and honored company of distinguished and immortal American Presidents.

He should have had respect, and not contempt, for the historic admonition of Washington and the inspiring example of Jefferson.

He should have joined the immortal Jefferson in saying:

"I should unwillingly be the person who, disregarding the sound precedent set by an illustrious predecessor, should furnish THE FIRST EXAMPLE OF PROLONGATION BEYOND THE SECOND TERM OF OFFICE."

Mr. Roosevelt has shown himself to be entirely willing to shatter the principles of Washington, Jefferson and ALL his predecessors in office.

But the American people can still preserve those high and vital principles.

Let the American people rise to their responsibilities better than Mr. Roosevelt rose to his.

THERE ARE 330 6-oz. glasses of beer in a half barrel which costs $7.75. My chief objective on this subject is to see an 8 oz. glass of beer can be sold at five cents at a profit of thirty-three and one-third per cent. Strong drinks in many places are sold in one oz. glasses. This means thirty-two glasses to the quart. As the average retail price is thirty-five cents you can figure out the profit on that . . . Why are so many important sessions of national conventions to choose a presidential nominee held late at night? I hope it is not because late at night human beings are tired and are more easily influenced, quicker to give in to the drivel put on by party leaders.

NEW YORK women work their domestic help much too hard and pay them much too little. No good can come of it . . . The Robin Hood angle in film stories, in which the handsome hero robs the rich and gives some of the money to the poor, has inspired thousands of young men to take up a life of crime. There should be a law against making heroes of crooks and murderers . . . Ann Sheridan had one hundred and seventy-eight proposals of marriage in June. One hundred and seventy-three of the gentlemen offered to show Ann how to take proper care of her money. One said Miss Sheridan would have to first pay his wife $150,000 so he could get a divorce. One was a Harvard man who said the "oomph girl" would be required by his mother to prove she is related to Gen. Sheridan. One was George Brent. Details as to the identity of the other two are lacking, but it is reasonable to suppose they were Abe Lyman, the band master, and Richard Watts, Jr., the dramatic critic.

MY DAY

HYDE PARK, July 19—My little birds have flown yesterday morning out into a strange world all by themselves. I hope they lead happy bird lives and are preserved from the many dangers they must meet, long enough, at least, to give them a few months of whatever constitutes happy bird life!

We sat and listened to the radio Wednesday night until the early hours of the morning. Curiously enough, I feel a little the way those young birds felt when they finally flapped off the window sill.

The world we are going into is certainly an unknown quantity to all of us.

FOR ANYONE near you, to be nominated for the presidency of these United States, whether for a first or a third term, is a very serious thing.

A heavy responsibility at home for domestic policies, and a heavy responsibility to shape a policy to guide this nation in the peaceful way that our people desire in the troubled world of today.

No one knows what will happen on election day, but during the next few months the two nominees must face the future and tell the people what their experience, their background and their vision makes them see as the mission of this country at home and abroad. Beyond that no one can know.

It seems too solemn a thing for me to wish for more at the present time than that the candidates may be given the ability to put their beliefs sincerely before the people. God grant the people will be given the wisdom to choose wisely, not for themselves alone, but with a realization of the weight of their responsibility in the world.

We all went to bed so late it was rather difficult to get up yesterday morning. After several urgent messages had come through from Chicago, my husband agreed that, since he could not go himself to the Democratic Convention, because of his feeling that he should not be so far away from Washington, he would like me to go.

I THINK he hoped I might be able to give the delegates a personal sense of appreciation he feels for their confidence in him, even though the service required is such a heavy responsibility.

The various changes in arrangements which had been made here for the day, the plans for flying out and returning as rapidly as possible made it a very busy morning. I was in New York city all day Wednesday and so am somewhat behind in much of my work, but I hope to catch up soon.

Franklin, Jr., came up from Washington to go out to Chicago with Mr. C. R. Smith, president of the American Airlines, and myself, and I was happy to see Elliott and Ruth, even though it was for a very brief time.

BARKLEYS GET THEIR SIGNALS CROSSED

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK, July 19—SPEECH: Senator Alben W. Barkley always has been accustomed to making long speeches, despite the admonition of his wife that shorter addresses would bring him more listeners . . . On Monday, in Chicago Senator Barkley was scheduled to address a group of delegates and friends. Mrs. Barkley decided to be his time-keeper. "When I wave a white handkerchief," she told him, "then you'll know it's time to stop." The Senator agreed to heed this signal . . . Shortly after he began his speech he saw the white handkerchief flutter—and so he concluded his address forthwith. Later, he was asked why he hadn't reached the points he said he would discuss—and he explained the handkerchief signal . . . "But, Alben, that was no signal," said Mrs. Barkley. "I just had to blow my nose."

MARTHA RAYE

ENTRANCE: Mary Eben aide to Missy LeHand, the President's secretary, was the one who brought F. D. R.'s letter to Senator Barkley . . . Mary also had a letter from the President to Jim Farley—requesting that Jim get Mary into the Convention Hall. Farley obtained an assistant sergeant-at-arms bacge for her, and then departed . . . But when Mary tried to enter the hall she learned that a badge wasn't enough—that she also required a ticket. She secured entrance, however, by displaying the letter, in the President's handwriting, asking that she be permitted inside.

SUCCESS: Yip Harburg, the lyricist, wrote a new specialty song for Al Jolson to sing in the new Jolson musical . . . The star, who was involved in so many entanglements—both of the heart and his work—said: "I won't put any new song into the show now. I haven't time to study the lyrics" . . . "Then I'll have the lyrics type-written for you, and you can read 'em," Harburg proposed . . . "But I can't read without my glasses," Jolson protested . . . "Then we'll have Martha Raye and Bert Gordon accompany you in that song, and they'll wear glasses too," Yip suggested . . . Jolson finally agreed. And, in Detroit, when the trio wearing glasses sang that song, "Down on the Old Dude Ranch," it elicited cheers and now is the show's hit.

RETURN: When Richard Whitney emerges from Sing Sing Prison, he will not be permitted to return to Wall St. brokerage. His conviction will bar him from pursuing his profession . . . Whitney, however, has job waiting for him on The Financial Reporter.

THE OPEN-WORK FOOTWEAR the gals are wearing has produced a new phenomenon in hosiery with all the colors of the rainbow forming a spectrum at the heel and toe . . . Martha Burke, the Cocoanut Grove's pianiste with Mickey Alpert's otherwise completely male band, has gone to Toronto to check on the family fortunes in wartime . . . The man who gave Walter Winchell the opportunity to "scoop" his rival by interviewing the late G. Zangara, who shot Anton Cermak of Chicago, is visiting in Boston . . . Then a deputy sheriff in Miami, and charged with the assassin's custody, he admitted Winchell to Zangara's cell for the first talk with the deranged man . . . He is Guy C. Reeve, now director of public safety at Coral Gables . . . Bill Hayes, the tax expert, is showing him the town.

THE MAYFAIR'S NEW SHOW is pretentious, but also entertaining . . . Walter Wanger, the dance director, is weaving continuity into his revues, and the chorus keeps in whatever character it assumes in the opening prance . . . An opening chorus of sprites and goblins, a mid-show interlude of fencing or something similarly athletic, and a finale with the girls emulating anything from Harriet-Hector-gone-slightly-screwy to Niobe-all-tears-at-the-Well—that, my friends, is not only de trop but corny in Dance Director Wanger's book.

WONDERLAND PARK continues its golden career and the talents of George Huestis and Sheldon H. Fairbanks, press agent and managing director, respectively of the Revere track, has been the happiest sort of a fusion . . . The all-time record would have fallen last Saturday if the elapse of time between races had been as long as it was when the record (a handle of $231,000) was set three years ago . . . Saturday's total was less than $13,000 short of that mark.

THE WONDERLAND directorate, on the theory that the public is right, has concluded that greyhound racing in Massachusetts—a sport with the State as an active partner—should have an articulate, and not an apologetic voice . . . An average of 12,000 fans nightly are paying their way through the Wonderland turnstiles . . . With the opening of the new Raynham track next Tuesday night, attendance at dog tracks will exceed, on an equal number of days' basis, both horse racing and professional baseball in Massachusetts.

CHALLEDON'S owner, W. L. Brann, must be a very modest gentleman . . . Rather than apply for tickets for his party at the Paddock Club, where he is not a member, Mr. Brann asked the help of a friend, who in turn appealed to Ira Hamilburg, the master of Larch Hill Farm (Brookline), for aid . . . Ira was chuckling when he complied with the request . . . Both C. F. Adams or Bruce V. C. Wetmore, the big bosses of the track, would have torn down a wall of the Paddock Club, if necessary, to do a favor for the owner of the horse

BOGART STEPS INTO MUNI ROLE

By Louella O. Parsons

Humphrey Bogart

HOLLYWOOD, July 19—You know the old axiom, "A prophet without honor in his own country?" Well suddenly Warners have discovered Humphrey Bogart and from now on he's going to be one of their top men. And rightly, for Bogey is a swell actor. Today he was given the Paul Muni role in "High Sierra," which Muni turned down. It is no secret that relations between Paul and his bosses are strained. He wants to do "Beethoven" and Warners believe at this time they cannot make any money with a biography of this type.

"High Sierra" goes into production in two weeks with Ida Lupino co-starring with Humphrey and Raoul Walsh, who directed them in "They Drive By Night," wielding the megaphone. Oh, yes, Arthur Kennedy, one of the new Warner players, and Henry Travers will have featured roles.

SNAPSHOTS OF HOLLYWOOD. Greta Garbo went social the other eve and gave a party in honor of the Alex Wenner-Gren friends from Sweden. They are the people who own the Southern Cross, which picked up the Lubitsch baby; don't be surprised if Fritz Feld, famous character actor, and Virginia Craft, U. C. L. A. graduate, announce their engagement; the Frances Robinson-Robert Riskin romance is really at fever heat. They were twoing at the Matty Malneck opening at Victor Hugo's.

SAW MRS. WAYNE MORRIS, her mother, and Baron Polan at a table for three; Jane Wyman, Ronald Reagan, Kay Kayser and a very pretty girl with the Jules Steins; David Lipton left yesterday for Coffeeville, Kansas, to arrange for the premiere of "When the Daltons Rode." Dave said: "You suggested Coffeeville in your column and here it is"; Eddie Sutherland planed to Syracuse for the opening of "The Boys from Syracuse."

NEVER SAW two happier people than the John Randolph Hearsts, who expect the stork in December; the Johnny Weismullers have built an elaborate nursery for their expected arrival in September; Gene Towne and Lucia Carroll, formerly Lucia Le Cert, a twosome at the Bar of Music opening; Errol Flynn stagging it. Also Frank Borzage; Liz Whitney with an unknown gent; Lucille Ball with Desi Arnaz and do they act as if they mean it; Edgar Kennedy's 13-year-old daughter ill at the Hollywood Hospital with an ear affliction.

TWO-MINUTE STORY

THE BOATS docked at 79th Street Pier and nudged the rubber bumpers gently. A girl, head up, heels clicking, marched out to the end of the dock, then wheeled around and waited impatiently for the man who had been ambling along behind her.

"Well?" he asked laconically, shifting the toothpick from the left to the right side of his mouth. "Now you got me down here, what'll it be?"

The girl glared at him and stamped her foot.

"YOU'RE ALWAYS telling me to go jump in a lake. Well, that's just what I'm going to do." She paused for a moment, breathing heavily, and watching him carefully for the effect of her words.

"Gonna do it now?" he asked.

A violent shivering of the girl's whole frame was his only answer.

He glanced at his wrist watch. "Ten to eight. I have an appointment downtown at nine thirty. Well, go ahead."

The girl trembled with rage, as she swung around to him. "Never forget an appointment, do you? Always on time."

"Nope, never forget an appointment. Always on time."

She stripped off her coat and let it drop to the rough boards.

"Am I suppose to play hero and wet myself trying to save you, or is this the exception?"

"Why don't you save your cheap cracks?"

The man gathered himself together from his leaning position and walked up beside the girl.

"Kidding aside, I'm sorry we're quitting this way.

"I guess I won't be going up the river on excursions any more. No fun going alone."

THE GIRL turned suddenly with a sob and threw herself into his arms.

"There, there. You know I'm only fooling when I tell you to go jump in a lake. You know that, don't you?"

She raised a tearful face to his. "Yes, but when you're so nice to other women, I . . . I just can't bear it."

"You're trembling. Here, put your coat on." He helped her into her coat, and glanced at his watch again. We'd better hurry. I have a nine-thirty appointment downtown." He smiled as she frowned. "Remember, I made it with you last night?"

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

I WAS SCARED! Shivering down to the toes of my beautiful new, white shoes. I was Going To Join the Church!

Now, I had wanted to join the church. It had been my other home since babyhood. Besides, the Other Girls were going to. And Mother would make me a wonderful white dress like theirs.

AND SO I had listened dutifully to all the preliminaries. Heard, as if it were a fairy tale, the puzzling, unreal story of those last hours in that "upper room" where the young Christ, who was so soon to die, observed the Passover with those who'd walked His trail. Heard how He had broken bread . . . and poured the wine . . . and said:

"Eat . . . drink . . . in memory of me . . . This is my body . . . given for you . . . This is my blood . . . take this and divide it among yourselves . . ."

Strange words. I'd listened to them a hundred times, dreamily, as a child listens. Taken them without question. Now, suddenly, looking at the waiting loaf and cup, they took on a terrible life! I didn't—I didn't—want to drink someone's blood or eat His body! What was it all about? Why . . . why . . .

Then, suddenly, the cup was at my frightened lips. I had taken it. Round-eyed with horror, I waited for the miracle to happen . . . But there was no miracle . . . Just the familiar sights I had so often seen. Old Mrs. Harkins, sitting in a dark corner, weeping quietly for her little dead girl. Young Mr. Felton, who everybody said was a black sheep, looking ashamed and lonely beside his grim mother. Poor, pretty Ida Wilson, whose husband was almost never home, sitting straight and white-faced, but with a strange quiet in her shadowed eyes.

JUST THE same faces seen through a mystery I could not understand. Faces that had always seemed so old and apart. But now, amazingly, they seemed new and near. I still could not fathom what lay behind their pale, strained masks. But we had drunk from the same cup. I wasn't just a little girl any more . . . I was part of older people, strange people . . . part of everyone.

There's fear now, such as most of us never imagined before Pain and loss and looming hardship that seem to darken our individual lives. Don't let them! Don't drink your cup or break your bread alone. Don't hoard your hurts. Divide them! Realize they are part of the common lot. Eat and drink with your neighbor . . . share your pain with his and be comforted. In memory of one who shared His all—upon a cross.

Mrs. William Lindsey on Cape

BECAUSE OF THE WAR Mrs. William Lindsay, mother of Leslie Lindsey for whom the beautiful little Leslie Lindsey Memorial Chapel on Newbury street is a Memorial, is once again residing in this country . . . She closed her home in Grosvenor square, London, and is spending the summer at her estate in Osterville . . .

Long a resident of Boston where she lived in that massive castle-like mansion on Bay State road, Mrs. Lindsay went abroad to live after the death of her husband in the early 1920's . . . Before his death Mr. Lindsey erected the lovely Gothic Chapel in memory of his daughter Leslie, who with her bridegroom, Stuart Southam Mason, was lost in the tragic Lusitania disaster in the last war . . .

Historic Homes Open

Mrs. Allen Wiley of Kittery, Me., the former Muriel Langton of Needham, is chairman of a tour of historic houses in Kittery which will be held from 11 to 5 o'clock tomorrow for the benefit of the Kittery Girl Scouts.

Some of the old homes are noted for their historical associations and have been immortalized in novels by Kenneth Roberts and other noted authors. Others are of interest because they still contain the personal effects and original copies of the works of their early owners who made contributions to the literary field of America.

Among them are the Lady Pepperell House, built in 1760; Sparhawk House, 1740; the Thaxter residence, home of Miss Rosamond Thaxter, granddaughter of the poetess, Celia Thaxter; the home of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Howells which contains the library of the late author, William Dean Howells; the old Congregational Church, built in 1730 and the cemetery where many interesting inscriptions, including the Browning epitaph, may be found in the grave markers.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
I'm very much interested in a charming young lady, to whom I've never been introduced. I spoke to her over the telephone the other day and tried to make a date, but she said she would meet me only on condition I bring along a certain boy who is a mutual friend of ours, to effect a proper introduction. Do you think she is justified in insisting that I bring along this other boy? JACK

A girl is always justified in laying down the conditions under which she is willing to meet a stranger. This young lady evidently is very particular and I admire her for it. By all means, take along the mutual friend and get the introduction over with in the proper manner.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
I have a problem which I do not care to discuss with my family; hence, I'm coming to you.

For the past seven months I've been going with a young lady, who confided in me a few weeks ago that she is secretly married to a man in another state. Only one member of her family, with whom she lives, knows about it.

I used to visit her two and three times a week, but since she told me about her marriage, I have a guilty conscience, and go only once a week or even less. I do enjoy myself when I'm in her company, and she says she gets so lonely at times and looks forward to my visits.

Do you think I'm being fair to her or to myself, or to her husband? I am 22 and she is 21 years.
FRANK.

It would be better for your peace of mind, it seems to me, if you cut out that one visit a week to this girl. According to your letter, all of which I am not printing, this girl is cheating on her husband.

You're likely to get so endless complications in that sort of an affair, and it would be better if you broke with her edately.

Knit Cable-Stitch Cardigan

IT'S A KNIT-FAVORITE that knows no lapse from popularity . . . the cable stitch. It's masculine and burly when used in a man's sports sweater, feminine and intricate when used in an unusual pattern and done in finer yarn, as in this cardigan, on which knitting directions are ready to fill your requests. The detail is rather fine on this sweater, giving it less of an outdoor-ish look than many of the sports sweater patterns we've offered you. The round neckline, the tight waist and the sleeves are all bound off with delicate crochet stitches. And, though the photograph doesn't show it quite plainly, the pattern of the sweater itself seems to be a wide basket weave, with cable stitch motifs at fairly wide intervals. For your set of knitting directions, simply write Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, Boston Evening American, and please inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Don't 'Relax' on Conduct

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Vacation time is relaxation time. And when you relax, you will, consciously or unconsciously, reveal your real manners.

If you are a mannerly person, your intentions will be so sure that everything you do or say will be a manifestation of your fine manners. This is an ideal "conditioning" of your manners, to tolerate no difference between the manners you show when you are on vacation and your manners at any other time.

At vacation places our attractive qualities are usually appreciated and given full scope, so watch out because our less attractive qualities are revealed in bold relief. So let your attractive qualities come out in the sun and have a fine time.

Egg Drinks Are Tops In Summer Hospitality

By MARTHA LEE

THERE ISN'T ANYTHING nicer to chat about on a breathless summer day than tall clinking glasses brimful of something cool. Why, it will take your temperature down a couple of notches just to think about them!

And this is where fresh eggs come into the picture, for they shake or beat up with milk or fruit juices into the most delicious and refreshing pick-me-ups, which are not only cool but nourishing, so do double duty.

CHOC-O-EGG SHAKE

4 cups milk
4 eggs
¼ cup chocolate sirup
Nutmeg
½ cup heavy cream

Chill milk. Beat the egg yolks, and add milk. Beat in or shake with chocolate sirup (or malt cocoa). Beat egg whites and fold in. Pour into tall glasses. Top with spoonfuls of whipped cream. Dust with nutmeg or grated unsweetened chocolate. Cream may be omitted, and part of the egg whites saved for topping.

GRAPE JUICE WITH EGG

3 tbsp. orange juice

THE mob was at Johnny Stumble's gym. They were watching Lew Pannicker readying up for his championship fight with Sammy Redd. Lew was a featherweight. He was a dancer. He moved around the ring like a shadow. He could hit from any angle, but he didn't have any power in his punch.

The Cast of Characters in "Hungry"

EDDIE, a fighter who puts up his best scraps when he is hungry.
MAX, Eddie's astute manager.
ANNIE, the one really responsible for Eddie's rise to the championship.

Hungry

By Charles McGuirk

Max Adler wished he had him. Max was a fight manager who looked a little like the late Joe Jacobs. He also imitated the late Joe Jacobs in every possible respect. He smoked big cigars which were not as good as the late Joe's but were just as impressive. His clothes were as noisy. But the important thing was that he tried to think like the late Joe. He tried to figure angles. And he was doing all right. He had a stable of twelve fighters. They were in all classes and everybody on Jacobs Beach knew that when one of Max's fighters was in there, you could expect anything from a horse-shoe in his glove to a foul claim from being hit on the ear.

So Max was watching Lew Pannicker and wishing he had him. He was figuring angles by which he could steal him away from his manager. He was smoking a new kind of cigar that cost twice as much as any he had ever bought, and he was wondering whether the extra money was worth it. The kid sidled up to him. He said:

"Mister Adler?"

Max moved the cigar over to the side of his mouth with his tongue so he could see over it and he looked at the boy. He was nicely built. His shoulders were broad and sloping. He wasn't very tall but in spite of that, he looked rangy. He moved around so that he made you think of a cat, as though his muscles were tied together nice and then screwed up tense. His face had been dented here and there. Nobody could take him for anything else but a fighter. He carried a small canvas bag in his hand.

"Yeh," Max admitted, "what's on your mind?"

"My name's Eddie Spann," the kid said, "and I'm a fighter. I just tumbled in from Scranton and I wonder if you could handle me."

Then Max saw for the first time the hunger in his eyes. They were big gray eyes and they were widened a little and his mouth was drawn as if the pangs of hunger were gnawing his insides. Max never had seen a guy who looked so hungry. So he said:

"When did you eat last?"

"About 3 o'clock yesterday. (That was 24 hours ago.) I had a hamburger and a cuppa coffee."

"Wait'll I see," Max told him. So he walked over to Abe Spartz who handled Lew Pannicker and he asked him if as a favor he would let the kid go a round or two with Lew and Abe said, "Sure."

So in about 15 minutes, Eddie was in there sparring with Lew. He looked great. He worked like he was on springs. There wasn't much he didn't know about fighting and Max, who made it a practice to watch all the preliminary boys all over the country remembered hearing his name. There was something about Eddie that stuck in Max's mind but he couldn't remember what it was.

SEEKS ANGLE IN EDDIE

Max liked the way Eddie worked right away but what he couldn't remember about Eddie worried him because he knew that the thing he was forgetting probably would furnish him with an angle with which he could handle Eddie. It was some peculiarity and Max went for peculiarities because they often made an ordinary fighter a good meal ticket or even a champion.

Like this. Dempsey was nothing but a stumble-bum who could take it until Jack Kerns changed him from a slow stand-up fighter with a useless left to a crouching fighter who moved with speed and counted on a powerful left hook. Carnera never was anything but a freak, but Bill Duffy handed him a lot of tankers that built him up into a champion. And Tony Galento was just a Charlie McCarthy for the late Joe Jacobs. Joe had made Tony forget that at best he was nothing but a preliminary boy and look where Tony had landed! They were angles.

So after Eddie had stepped two rounds with Lew, Max told him to go dress. Then Max gave him a fin and said he would go watch Eddie eat.

Max never had seen a guy eat like Eddie did. He ate everything on the bill-of-fare in a lunch wagon. From soup to apple pie with cheese. The bill was two bucks and anybody who can eat two bucks' worth of food in a lunch wagon is related to a boa constrictor. So right there, Max got his angle on Eddie. If he could keep him hungry, Eddie would have a chance to become a champion because when he was hungry he could fight like hell.

Max tossed him in with three easy ones in a row. And before each fight, he watched him while he slept. On the day of the fight, he fed him on water. Not a drop of anything else, solid or liquid. By the time Eddie got in the ring, he was as hungry as a Siberian wolf. And he acted like one. He won two of the fights with one-round knockouts. The other lasted three rounds, but that was a knockout, too.

The next fight was so easy that Max didn't pay much attention to it. It was with Mike Rufus, a stumble-bum that was going away. Mike was so punchy that he was fighting imaginary opponents all the time and when he got into a ring with a real one, he forgot to throw punches. But he still could hit. Two days before the fight, Max went to Kansas City with Charlie Intz, one of his fighters, who was fighting there the same night. The next morning, he saw in the papers that Mike Rufus had knocked Eddie Spann cold in the worst fight New York had ever seen.

She promised him she'd marry him if he won and became champion.

EATS UNTIL FIGHT

When he got back, he found out that Eddie had been eating up to an hour before the fight. The guy had been practically foundered with food. He had been so full he couldn't move.

That settled it. Max stayed right with Eddie and kept him hungry. He never let him have enough to eat. Eddie knocked out nine out of 13 opponents. He outpointed three. He drew with one. Max began to see visions. He saw Eddie the champion in his class. He saw all the dough they could both make. He was feeling like a million bucks when Annie came along.

Her name was Annie Oakley. She was a blonde. She danced in clubs that were not catering to the Park Avenue trade. She was a very cute little girl and she met Eddie in a taxi dance hall where she doubled when there was nothing doing on the stage. It was a case of love at first grapple. Eddie spent 10 bucks dancing with her. But he found out where she lived, which was worth 20.

Their love was true but stormy. They adored each other but they couldn't get along. They were always fighting and whenever they fought, Annie walked out on Eddie with the promise never to see him again. Eddie was suffering from one of these walk-outs when Max found out about it. He found out because Eddie sat down at a table and refused to eat a two-pound steak. Max proved and learned that Eddie was in love. Right away, he looked up Annie.

He was prepared to hate her because she was a broad stepping in to separate him from a meal ticket. But he didn't. He liked her. Annie was cute. And smart. He watched her for a week, without seeming to and then, satisfied, he propositioned her.

"Look," he said, moving the big cigar aside from his tongue, "Eddie's stuck on you. You got him punchy. So if you play your cards right, you can be the wife of a champion."

"That means a skunk coat and lots of dough, don't it?" she asked.

"You said it," Max agreed, "but you got to play your end right. Eddie's a hungry guy, see? He was born hungry. He spent most of his life eating or wishing he could. Then you came along and he fell for you. Well, love is just another kind of hunger and it's stronger in Eddie than the hunger for food. I noticed whenever you fight with him, he can't eat. See? Now look. Don't let nature double cross you. Don't marry the guy right away. Before a fight, string Eddie along—Hold out your kisses. Then he can whip a heavyweight. How about it?"

"Eddie and a skunk coat," Annie mused. "Well, it'll be hard to do but I'll do it."

HOLDS OUT KISSES

They shook hands on it and she kept her promise. She sent Eddie into ten fights wanting her so much that he tried to kill his opponents. Everyone of those fights he won by a knock-out and so he signed up with the champ. By this time, though, Annie was crazier about Eddie than he was about her. She not only could not eat but she couldn't sleep and she couldn't concentrate on anything but Eddie. She couldn't hold a job. The day before the fight, she came to Max.

"Listen," she told him, "I wouldn't rat on you. I want Eddie. I don't care whether he's champion or a bum. I can't refuse him kisses because I want them more than he does. Our agreement's off."

"O. K.," Maxie said, staring at her and thinking, "Let's go and have a drink."

She was emotional over Eddie anyway so Max got her drunk and he put her in his car and drove her to his sister's place in New Jersey. She woke up at 3 o'clock the day of the fight and she called the hotel where Eddie was staying. Max's sister had had a long talk with her and promised to drive her over to see Eddie fight and then to let her go back for him after it. So Annie was will to see Eddie and she told him so. She promised him she'd marry him if he won and became champion. Eddie walked into that fight and hauled off and knocked out the champion in one minute and twenty-two seconds of the first round.

He didn't wait for the cheers. He ran back to the dressing-room and got his clothes on. He found Annie waiting for him and they drove down to Maryland and got married at 5 o'clock the next morning. Eddie then got on the telephone to tell Max the good news. Max was in bed. He didn't seem excited.

"Fine Eddie," he said, "congratulations. I don't know when your next fight will be. I ain't handling you any more. I sold you to Abe Sparks for 10,000 bucks. He's your manager now. I could have got more for you but I wouldn't stick a friend any more than I have to."

"What do you mean, stick a friend?" Eddie bellowed. "Ain't I the world's champion?"

"You are now," Max told him gently, "but you won't be long. You got everything, and a fighter that's got everything ain't worth a damn."

Mr. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

NEW YORK, July 19—A day in New York.

Breakfast at the Edison where the waitress had a touch of Ireland in her voice and in her smile. More important, the young lady made it her duty to see that my bacon was not done to a crisp. Then for a visit with Walter Howey, supervisory editor of the Hearst Boston newspapers, who was taking the sun outside of his hospital room while recovering from the effects of a recent successful operation.

JENKINS

"What kind of a fight did Jenkins give Armstrong?" asked Mr. Howey.

"Jenkins made a good showing, but was outclassed," I replied. "Armstrong set a maddening pace, and did not give Jenkins a chance to get set. The Texan was dead tired half way through the fourth round when Armstrong went to town with his left hooks to the jaw. There was terrific power behind those blows."

"Was Jenkins in poor condition as the sports writers say? Was he when Referee Donovan stopped the bout?" asked the editor.

"Jenkins was in a state of near collapse at the time as was quite evident when he fell off his stool after Donovan declared Armstrong the winner," I answered.

"I liked Eight Thirty in the Massachusetts Handicap," said Mr. Howey. "I was pleased Dave Wilson picked the winner of the big race. Wilson has been particularly successful in naming the winners in important handicaps."

Mr. Howey looked in fine physical condition, and as I left he told me he would soon see me back on the firing line in the office of the American-Record.

"I always feel best when I am in the office where the action is," said the editor.

A MEETING WITH Boxing Commissioner Bill Brown at the New York A. C. . . . Brown told me he didn't approve of Kate Jenkins, wife of Lew Jenkins, stepping into his training camp and taking command . . . The commissioner intimated he was in favor of a rule that would ban wives from training camps . . . Managers and trainers, and probably the boxers themselves, would approve of such an edict.

A hello from Mike Jacobs who was preparing checks for Armstrong and Jenkins.

"It isn't a poor pay day for Armstrong and Jenkins with each of them getting about $35,000," said Jacobs.

I told Mike I thought Armstrong and Jenkins put up the best bout of the year, and did much for boxing.

"Jenkins cannot beat welterweights, but will lick any of the lightweights," remarked Jimmy Johnston . . . "Lew is a good puncher . . . He was beaten badly by Armstrong partly because he lacked experience . . . In the first two rounds when Armstrong was blazing speed at Jenkins the Sweetwater puncher should have merely backed and not tried to do any hitting . . . In this way he would have conserved his energy and would have been better able to cut loose later on in the bout.

"Jenkins tried to box as fast as Armstrong and tired . . . He was then easy for the welterweight champion . . . Youngsters like Jenkins have to learn in actual bouts how to conserve their energy."

A TAXI JUMP to the Penn Station where I met two of the little Bostons who are vacationing on Long Island . . . And then on to the World's Fair . . . Greetings from Bill Hayes who is in charge of the working press arrangements . . . Bill, an old time baseball writer, asked me to say hello for him to Joe Cashman and Bill Grimes.

The little Bostons weren't a bit interested in the industrial exhibits and so we spent the afternoon in the amusement section . . . As we stood outside of the Palace of Wonders watching headless Olga, I heard the announcer saying, "And we have with us today Mr. Boston and the little Bostons who are in town to do the fair" . . . I looked up to see Jack Kneeland, a former Boston boy who has gone a long way in the amusement field . . . Jack used to be associated with Johnny O'Connor, manager of Fred Waring . . . Kneeland told me the amusement section of the fair was doing a good business . . . The attendance at the fair is running between 90,000 and 100,000 a day . . . Try and laugh that one off . . . This will positively be the last year of the fair, declared Kneeland.

Dinner at a pleasant Dutch cafe where there were tables outside near a man-made pond . . . With singing waiters and fine music . . . Then for another round of the fair to see the lights . . . Colored lights danced through fountains and water falls while bands played and fireworks added to the excitement of things . . . A trip in the sky ride with the entire fair at our feet.

Back to New York by way of the Long Island Railroad . . . A cheerio from the little Bostons as they started on their way back to one of the Long Island beaches . . . A taxi to my hotel where I found a message informing me that Mrs. George R. Canty, wife of the U. S. Consul to Amsterdam, and George, Jr., had arrived in New York on the Manhattan after a trip that took them through war torn Europe to Lisbon, Portugal . . . Word from Mrs. Canty that her husband was still at his post of duty at Amsterdam doing what he could to assist Americans and to care for the interests of this government.

To Lindy's where I met Jack Miley, Al Buck, Mike Jacobs and other people in sports and in the newspaper field who do not believe in retiring early at night . . . to bed to store up some energy for another day, and the trip back to Boston.

Twelve-year-old George Canty, Jr., is to accompany me to Boston today and then to Scituate where he will erase from his mind memories of bursting bombs tossed from airplanes over Europe.

TAKE JOE, WE'LL KEEP DOM

Tavern Boys All Up for Sox Spark Plug

By HERB FINNEGAN

One year ago, Joe DiMaggio was generally acclaimed the greatest all-round player in baseball. One year from now, that honor may belong to his younger brother Dominic. Don't take my word for it. Take it from the boys in the Tavern.

Dom

Joe

WHICH DO YOU PREFER?

"I'll take him over Joe right now," said Mr. Rickey (Gin, not Branch). "He can throw better, he's way ahead of him running bases, he's got more spirit, and he'll hit well enough for any man's club."

"Yeh," chimed in Mr. Collins. (Tom, not Eddie). "Joe ain't been the same since he married that actress. Too many night clubs, I guess. He'd be better off if he went fishin' winters like he useter."

Yes, young Mr. DiMaggio has captivated the imagination of Boston fandom. Only shoulder high to Joe, the 23-year-old San Franciscan has been pulling plays at Fenway Park this week that the fans haven't seen there since the pre-war, dead ball days.

Here are some of the highlights:

SUNDAY

FIRST GAME—Scored winning run in 11th inning of first game, going from first to home like a frightened deer on Cramer's double.

SECOND GAME—Third Inning. Choked Browns rally by throwing out Judnich at third on rifle throw to Tabor, bringing crowd to its feet cheering. Fifth inning. Hit first home run of major league career, giving Sox the spark to pull out second victory of day.

MONDAY

THIRD INNING—Tripled with three on, spurring Sox to 10-6 victory.

WEDNESDAY

FIRST GAME—Seventh Inning—Osty on second, DiMag on first, Cramer sacrifices. Pitcher Benton throws ball past Kress at third. Osty stops at third to pull up pants, chased home by Coach Daly. DiMag never letting up, runs up Osty's back to score from first on throw.

SECOND GAME—First Inning—On third base as a result of double and Cronin infield single. Trapped off third on Williams' grounder to York. Running like Eddie Collins of yore, feinted past Kress to reach third safely, upset rookie Clay Smith so much that Doerr cleared bases moment later with home run.

THURSDAY

FIRST INNING—Saved Hash's scalp momentarily by making miraculous catch of Kress's long drive with bases full and two out.

EIGHTH INNING—Bases full, nobody out. Tigers one run behind. Tebbets filed to DiMag, who lined perfect strike to plate, which forced Manager Baker to hold York on third. Moment later, Averill hit into double play.

THE PEOPLE'S CHOICE

There have been other spine tinglers, but those have been the highlights. He's either saving games with catches, with his rifle arm, or scoring the winning runs. He's forever in the picture, and the fans have taken to him as they have to no other ball player in years.

He's given the Sox a lift they needed badly. Only last Saturday they were blanked twice by the White Sox and were in the dumps, just as they were July 4 when they dropped a double header to the Yanks here.

Five games off the pace last Saturday and only 1½ games ahead of the fourth place Yankees. They drew only 17,000 to their Sunday doubleheader with the Browns and only 2500 Monday. Happily they won all three games.

As a result they found themselves back in the race again Wednesday because Detroit and Cleveland continued to stumble, and when the Sox took both ends of the mid-week doubleheader from the Tigers they were only a few points out of first place. O. K Mr. Ripley!

They're a full game behind today, because they dropped that 11-inning thriller yesterday, but they're still very much in the race despite the most horrible pitching any first division club ever received.

SPIRIT CONTAGIOUS

And the main reason they're up there is DiMaggio. Ask anyone who has been at Fenway lately.

A regular only a week, the kid has made a new team of the Sox. Williams is no longer sulking. He's hitting, making backhanded catches and hustling as he never did before. And Cramer, great fly

Triple Play!

Sox Lose Chance to Set Pace By Falling Victim of Triple Play

By BILL CRIMES

Any time that a major, minor or college team, becomes so impressed over its success during the early part of any ball game that it elects to coast, it is not only taking too much for granted but invariably it's headed directly into trouble.

Along about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon the Red Sox were in first place. They were leading the Detroit Tigers, 8 to 3, and the New York Yankees were out in front of the Cleveland Indians, 6 to 0.

But, when the clock on the center field fence ticked around to 6:12 the Red Sox were back in third place. They had put back their five-run lead and were trailing the Tigers, 10 to 8, with the third and final man down in the 11th round.

K. O. TIGER ROOKIE

The Red Sox felt that they had the world by its tail after beating the Tigers twice in the doubleheader on the previous day.

Tied 3 all going into the last of the third, the Red Sox pounded Johnny Gorsica for four singles and a double and Jim Tabor greeted Archie McKlan, who relieved the Tiger rookie with none out, with a two bagger. After the next two Sox had been retired, Dom D Maggio scored Tabor with a sharp single to center field, for the fifth run.

Joe Heving had replaced Herbie Hash, the starting pitcher, with one down in the second, but the Virginian had set the stage for the Tigers to knot the score, which they did, via an error by Bobby Doerr on a D. P. ball.

But, when they scored five tallies in the third the Red Sox decided that they were in. They didn't allow themselves to be upset over the fourth Detroit run, which was put across in the fourth on Carney McCosky's two bagger and Rudy York's timely single, after two were out. They didn't even snap out of their coma when the Tigers scored two more runs in the seventh, for in their half of that stanza they blew a chance to cinch the game.

Jim Tabor started the last of the seventh with a single to center and went to second base when Johnny Peacock pushed a bunt over Mike Higgins' and "Dizzy" Trout's heads for an infield hit.

SOX GO NATIVE

The Red Sox were two runs out in front and had two men on and nobody out in the "lucky seventh."

The Tigers weren't even contesting. It was only a question of how many runs they'd beat Detroit.

But, then, the Red Sox went native.

Mary Owen bounced a grounder at Charlie Gehringer. Charlie picked the ball up in the baseline and made a stab to tag Johnny Peacock who had set sail for second base. Seeing that he was in a "tight," Johnny turned and started back for first base. Knowing all of the answers, Gehringer forgot all about Peacock and threw to Rudy York in time to nail Owen.

Either Peacock's motor or his brain stopped functioning when

Sullivan Hurls Final in Cinci

CINCINNATI, O., July 19—An unsuccessful western invasion is rapidly drawing to a close for the battered Bees who had a most welcome day of rest here.

Lefty Joe Sullivan will be the Swarm's hill choice while the Reds will rely on Junior Thompson who is seeking his 11th victory of the season.

8There is a chance that Gene Moore, who has been out of the lineup with a severe charley, may be able to resume his post in right field. If the Texas is set, Bama Rowell will be moved back to second base.

All-Star Card In Newmarket Big Car Races

NEWMARKET, N. H., July 19—The Newmarket Speedway will be the scene Sunday of the Eastern States Racing Association's fourth meeting of the year.

Many of the country's top flight big car drivers have already sent in their entries and the event will be the finest thus far this season.

The entries includes such famous names as Bumpy Bumpus, Eddie Casterline, Dizzy Vance, Joe Sostillo, Earl Horn, and many more of equal prominence.

Time trials will start at 12:30 and the first race goes off at 2:30 p. m.

TRIPLE? No, but on ensuing play triple play occurred. Here's situation. Tabor is shown here reaching third on steal. Peacock was on first. Owen hit to smart Mr. Gehringer, who started to tag out Peacocw. So Gehringer forgot Peacock for the nonce and retired Owen. Then Peacock was tossed out trying to reach second. Meanwhile Tabor, taking lead off third on rundown, was tripled at the plate. With wasted opportunities like that, no wonder Sox kicked the game away.

chaser as he is, never has been so spectacular as this past week.

Cronin is hitting like the 1930 Cronin. And even Rube Tabor has picked up the spirit of the thing. So when Foxxie returns for the Cleveland series, you can expect him to join the procession.

One week has been enough to prove that DiMag's the best right fielder Boston fans have lamped since Harry Hooper, and he's fast bringing the rest of the outfield up to the Speaker-Lewis-Hooper standard.

He's always on base, always annoying enemy pitchers. Has one reason why Cronin and Williams have picked up in their hitting because he's forever got the pitcher worried.

Yessir, he's already our choice for the Most Valuable player award in Boston.

No wonder the Tavern Boys, Mr. Ruppert and Mrs. Collins, are planning he'll be better than Joe in another year. And when he's better than Joe, he'll find nobody above him.

JENKINS, HENRY IN HEARING

NEW YORK, July 19 (INS)—The pugilistic faithful today convened in their customary nooks and crannies and came to the conclusion that it is impossible nowadays to hold an important fight without an aftermath.

In keeping with the trend of the times, Welterweight Champion Henry Armstrong and Lightweight Champion Lew Jenkins were to go before the New York State Athletic Commission this afternoon for unrevealed reasons.

QUESTION OF OPPONENTS

The guess was that these two, who battled Wednesday night to a technical knockout victory in six rounds for Armstrong, would be instructed to post forfeits binding them to agreements for making their next title defense against duly qualified opponents in this state.

And who will they meet? Frankly, specifically and succinctly they will encounter a lot of gents named Eddie, or some such, except for one notable exception. Armstrong may be prevailed upon to defend his welter title against Lou Ambers, who recently was knocked out by Jenkins for the lightweight crown.

JENKINS MAY DELAY

Ambers had outgrown the 135-pound division and inasmuch as he had given Armstrong two terrific battles, winning the last, the idea seemed to be that he was the best possible opponent for the little Negro.

As for Jenkins, the best match for him would be with Pete Lello, of Chicago, who is among those who have stopped the lightweight champion. However, Jenkins doesn't have to make a defense until October and probably will be in no rush to accept any challenges following the trouncing he took from Armstrong.

NBA Head Blasts Henry-Lew Battle

WASHINGTON, July 19 (INS)—Lieut.-Col. Harvey Miller, president of the National oxing Ass'n, today indignantly denounced the Henry Armstrong-Lew Jenkins fight "as another sacrifice of the best interests of boxing on the altar of the great god 'gate receipts.'"

Throwing a verbal haymaker at mixed-weight bouts, the doughty colonel claimed that the Armstrong-Jenkins fracas should never have been fought. Armstrong, he pointed out, is the welterweight champion, and Jenkins only a lightweight.

Let boxers stick to their own classes, was Miller's theme.

Zale's Pilot Ends Row Over Ring Bandages

SEATTLE, July 19 (AP)—After an argument over the amount of hand bandages had been settled, everything—including the weather—was ready today for tonight's 15-round fight between Al Hostak of Seattle and Tony Zale of Gary, Ind., for the 48-state NBA middleweight championship.

Sam Pian, co-manager for Zale, said the bandage argument had been settled amicably with State athletic commissioners, so all that now remains is for former lightweight Benny Leonard to call the boys to the center of the ring about 9 p. m. (P. S. T.) for their instructions, and then await the gong.

"We don't object to five or 10 yards of gauze on a fighter's hands," Pian explained, "but we don't want any tape or plaster of paris or that stuff so a fellow can punch his way through a brick wal. If this Hostak is such a puncher, okay, but why give him an iron mitt?"

Eddie Marino, Hostak's manager, disclaimed any desire to wrap the Seattle Slav's hands in anything but gauze, and scoffed at reports Al would bandage his hands heavily to protect his off-broken hands.

Hostak was a 10-8 favorite before his home town crowd. Promoter Nate Druxman said he expected some 17,000 persons would pay $50,000 to see the scrap at the Civic Stadium Field, under predicted starlit skies.

ALICE FACES BRITON

BALTIMORE, July 19 (AP)—Alice Marble, the nation's tennis queen, renewed today her campaign to add the Maryland and Mid-Atlantic championship to her long list of laurels and the immediate obstacle in her path was Valerie Scott, English star seeded second in the foreign list.

Miss Marble drew the number one court and first place on the day's program for her semi-finals clash with the British Wightman Cup player.

First-seeded Don McNeill, of Kenyon College, faced his biggest test of the tournament ing semi-finals match with Elwood Cooke, Portland, Ore., seeded third.

In theother men'ssemi-final, Welby Van Horn, Los Angeles, second seeded, was paired with the one un-seeded player still in the running—Jack Kramer of Belvedere Gardens, Calif.

Fighting for theother place in the women's finals were Mary Arnold, un-seeded Californian, and Pauline Betz, Californian, seeded fourth.

Van Horn and Bobby Riggs of Chicago, national amateur champion, who did not enter the singles, were paired in the doubles against Ronald Lubin and Arthur Mark, California.

The top doubles match in the women's division pitted Miss Marble and Mary Arnold, of California, against Helen Bernabrd and Louise Brough, also Californians.

Swim Champs Duel At Canobie Tonight

SALEM, N. H., July 19—With few exceptions the championship role among the women swimmers of New England will be intact tonight at Canobie Lake Pool here when the Boston Swimming Association stages its ninth annual meeting. The affair, always the feature of the outdoor swimming season, has attracted not only the sectional stars, but Kathleen and Betty Lawson of the W. S. A. of New York will be on hand to help provide intersectional rivalry.

DEFENDS TITLE. Dorothy Leonard, Worcester W.S.A., who will defend her N. E. A. A. U. 100-meter freestyle title tonight in ninth annual B. S. A. meet at Canobie Lake pool.

Doris Brennan of the Olneyville Boys' Club Auxiliary, national 300-meter individual medley champion, as well as holder of the New England mile freestyle and 880-yard title, will be on hand. Edna Soltysiak, her clubmate, who holds the N. E. 440-yard freestyle and 220-yard breaststroke titles, will also be here, as well as Nancy Paige of the B. S. A., 50-meter junior champion.

One of the best races in several years is expected when the Misses Brennan and Soltysiak meet in the senior N. E. 100-meter freestyle with Dorothy Leonard of the Worcester W. S. A. The last named is the defending champion, but it is by no means certain that she will retain her crown.

One might look to Miss Brennan to regain the century title, but Miss Soltysiak is a real contestant. She has by far the best record of any performer this outdoor season and she might well annex her fourth diadem. It should be a race well worth watching.

Henry McNamara, Boston "Y" and former champion, may upset Bernie Kelly of Athol in the senior diving title.

The senior 220 yards breaststroke championship has drawn a fast field and looks like Danny Regan, Lowell, may capture the crown but Ted Dekel and Tom McGrath, Worcester Boys' Club, and Bill Despres of Olneyville will make it uneasy for Regan.

Capt. Bob Manson of the Boston Swimming Association team is the standout in junior 100 meter free style but will have real opposition from Al Shapalis, Newton "Y," Don Gingras, Camp Devens, and Ed Hebbert of New Bedford Y. M. C. A.

In addition to those events mentioned, there are junior 100 meters breaststroke, and 100 meters backstroke, also 50 meter freestyle class B, all for women. For the men there are also 100 meters freestyle open, and 50 meters freestyle, class B.

SPEAKING OF MR. HAMILBURG, he and his beautiful wife, the former Esther Stevens of Brookline, are summering at their island, Beaver Island, in New Hampshire . . . It was in the adjoining waters of Beaver Island that the first Harvard-Yale boat-race was held, in the 1870's . . . It was on this island, also, that Ben Ames Williams, a former owner of the retreat, wrote many of his famous short stories and novels . . . Ben wrote "The Dreadful Night," and the story was a spooky recountal of fictional happenings on the island . . . It must have been pretty chilling . . . Mr. Hamilburg, who not only loves his island but revels in the writings of Mr. Williams, is sorry that he read the yarn.

INJURY TO END JACK'S COMEBACK

By Associated Press

Sallies Down Fistic Alleys: Don't be surprised if the Manassa Mauler is really through this time. That back injury he suffered in Detroit is no joke . . . Mrs. Kate Jenkins said, "Lew's mistake was that he grew a little careless when he had Armstrong where he wanted him." (We musta missed that) . . . Hats off to Buffalo for sending down Jackie Donovan, best looking prospect among the prelim boys at the fight Thursday night . . . Hype Igoe, the old smartie, is still taking bows for publicly picking Maxie Baer to stop Galento in eight and Armstrong to jar Jenkins in six . . . Johnny Ray, Billy Conn's manager, says if the pretty Pittsburgher doesn't weigh at least 180 for the Pastor fight, he (Ray) will eat all the coal in Pennsylvania, chunk by chunk . . .

Backstretch Brevities From Downs

By TOM SHEHAN

Jockey Arlin Basset, who has been on the ground, was to resume riding today. Negotiations have been completed which will transfer that rider's contract from Mrs. Val Wyse of Houston, Tex., to W. E. Boeing of Seattle. He will go from here to Saratoga with the division of the Boeing stable under Lester Horning.

Howard Scharman, son of Jules Scharman of the press box, saddled his first winner as a trainer when he sent out Tom Hayes' County Bond to win the sixth race. Howard and his cousin, Tom Hayes, parlayed a $2 bet into a bankroll with which they purchased County Bond at Tropical Park. They shipped him north and rode up in the car with him. Both young fellows have had a hand in the training of the horse and have won $1350 in purse money with him since. They bought the horse from A. V. Thomas for $200 cash and agreed to pay another $100 when he won his first race. They were only too glad to wire that Kentuckian a century note after the race yesterday.

George D. Widener's Eight Thirty, Greentree Stable's Hash, and Falaise Stable's War Dog have been shipped back to New York . . . Mrs. Hugh Good has purchased the three-year-old Bo Beau at private sale from Hal Price Headley . . . Dolly Val has been blistered and Trainer Dave Vititoe has put her up until the Narragansett meeting . . . Porter Roberts is coming over from New York to ride Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Good Turn in tomorrow's stake . . . Al Shelhamer will ride Blensign.

The Daily Double arrangement was upset when G. O. Russell's Weatherite and Mrs. J. Y. Christmas' Cleaning Time were scratched . . . Weatherite was scratched at the request of the Maryland Racing Commission, being on the suspended list of that body, and Cleaning Time was scratched because of showing signs of a bowed tendon.

J. A. Deaubler, whose Josie's Pal paid $115.80 after winning the fourth race, attends the University of Pennsylvania Veterinarian School, Trainer W. A. Croll, Jr. attended that school for a year or two, and both have been interested in saddle horses around Devon, Pa. . . . Deaubler's father bred the horse, a daughter of Sting . . . Eddie Smith, who was to ride the horse originally, cancelled all his mounts, and Red Crawford, a Jockey's Agent, suggested to Croll that he ride Durando . . . Charley came bouncing down in front.

After winning the seventh race with Chin Music, Hal Price Headley lost the Supremus filly to Mrs. Emil Denemark for $1250.

BOSTON'S OWN—Fred Egan, of Boston, sits in sulky behind Spencer Scott, 2:03, Hambletonian candidate. The colt, winner of his only two starts this year, will race tomorrow in the $8000 American Stake feature of Gansett's opening day harness program. Spencer Scott is owned by C. W. Phellis of Greenwich, Ct.

BIMELECH BIDS FOR TURF CROWN

CHICAGO, July 19 (AP)—Bimelech, Col. Edward R. Bradley's famed thoroughbred, will be crowned 3-year-old champion of 1940 if victorious tomorrow in the $50,000 Arlington classic stake.

The courageous son of Black Toney may go to the post in the mile and a quarter race an even-money choice to win. The field probably will include Gallahadion, entry of Mrs. Ethel V. Mars of Chicago and conqueror of Bimelech in the Kentucky Derby; Dit, third in the Derby; Millstale stable's Andy K., the Dixiana stable's Sirocco and the outsider, A. C. Ernst's Alhalon.

GALLAHADION THREAT

The 80-year-old Bradley, too ill to attend the race, sent out the first winer of the classic in 1929—Blue Larkspur. He has often Bimelech his best horse since Blue Larkspur. He was undefeated as a two-year-old. This season he won the Blue Grass Stakes, the Kentucky Derby trial, Preakness and Belmont. He ran second in the Derby.

Gallahadion, which defeated Bimelech in the Derby at 35 to 1, but lost to him in the Preakness and Belmont, appears to be Bimelech's most dangerous threat. Gallahadion will be ridden by Jockey Carroll Bierman, who piloted him in the Derby, while F. A. Smith will be aboard Bimelech.

Andy K. is the problem of the race. He sulks in workouts at times, often forgets to run in a straight line, and ran a bad last behind the victorious Gallahadion in the special mile/race last Saturday.

DIT A DARK HORSE

Dit has not accomplished much since winning the Wood Memorial. However, Dit is trained by the shrewd Max Hirsch, who has a habit of winning important races with horses that do not figure to do so.

If six go to the post tomorrow, the race will gross $50,570 net to the winning owner with the exception of Andy K.'s. Because Andy is a $1500 supplementary entry, a victory to him would net $36,570. Horses finishing second, third and fourth will earn $6000, $4000 and $2000 respectively.

Rolfe Says Sox Have Jitters, Sees Yanks 1st

NEW YORK, July 19 (INS) — Red Rolfe, brilliant third baseman of the Yanks, predicted today his club would be in first place within two weeks and from then on "it would be a breeze for the champions."

"The Indians, Tigers and Red Sox seem to have the jitters," said Red, "and once we overhaul them, they'll fold up."

Six to Battle For $50,000

CHICAGO, July 19 (INS)—Six horses, cream of the American 3-year-division, are expected to go to the post tomorrow in the $50,000 Arlington Classic Stakes.

The twelfth renewal of the stakes will see such claimants to the 3-year-old racing honors for 1940 as Bimelech, Gallahadion, winner of this year's Kentucky Derby, Dit, Andy K., Sirocco and Alhalon.

Bimelech has been installed as 8-5 favorite to win the rich prize and the beautiful gold cup.

$25,000 Derby Draws 5 Stars

LOS ANGELES, July 19 (AP)—Five members of the "I Beat the Kentucky Derby Champion Club," a none too silent group with wins over Gallahadion, will be in the lineup tomorrow for Hollywood Park's third annual special for three-year-olds—the $25,000 Hollywood Derby.

Leading with the two big threats of the race, the five are: Miciand, Sweepida, Weigh Anchor, Royal Crusader and Big Ben.

Each of these defeated Gallahadion last winter, but the Ethel V. Mars colt ran over most of them at one time or another, too.

Fearless Peter Wins Goshen Pace Feature

GOSHEN, N. Y., July 19 (INS)—Fearless Peter, the three-year-old son of Peter Volo, owned by Dr. L. M. Gullinger of Andover, O., and ridden by the veteran Dr. Hugh Parshall, was inscribed in the Grand Circuit trotting books today as winner of the $5000 Village Farm Stake for pacers, feature event of the fourth day's card at historic track here, he took both heats in 2:07 and 2:05¼.

Athlone Flaxey Guy, five-year-old trotter owner by eLo C. McNamara of Indianapolis, took both heats of the trotting Club Stake in 2:09 and 2:07½.

Dr. Parshall and Will Fleming eacvh were fined $100 for passing through the barrier in the second heat of the Trotting Club Stake for four-year-old pacers.

BIEN CHAMPION

POLAND SPRING, Me., July 19 (INS)—A. J. Bien today had won the National Freight Traffic Golfers' Association tournament, defeating George Wood, 1 up, in the first division.

McCarthy To Describe Every Race

PAWTUCKET, R. I., July 18—Two important additions were made to the all-star lineup assembled at Narragansett Park for the 13-day Grand Circuit harness race meeting, which opens there Saturday. Clem McCarthy, ace sports announcer and Harry I. Day and his famous photo-finish camera are the added starters, relied upon to aid in making a success of this most important trotting meet ever held in New England.

Clem McCarthy, known from coast to coast for his vivid broadcasts of the Kentucky Derby, the Santa Anita Handicap and the Narragansett Special, will preside over the public address system, describing each race from start to finish.

McCarthy will fill an engagement in Chicago and will not be available Saturday but will come here Monday and will remain through the meeting.

Senator Frank Wiswall, executive secretary of the United States Trotting Association and one of the country's leading authorities on light harness racing, will pinch hit for McCarthy on opening day.

Securing the Harry I. Day camera for this meeting is regarded by horsemen as the final touch to assure an unprecedented success. The Day camera, most costly in use at any track, delivers finished pictures to the judges within 50 seconds after the finish of a race.

Never before at any trotting meet, has a photo finish camera been used and its adoption by the Grand Circuit at this meeting marks another important "first" for Narragansett Park.

With the McNamara barrier to insure fast starts and with the Day camera to help the judges determine close finishes, Gansett's first Grand Circuit meeting looms as the best to be staged anywhere on the big wheel this, or any other year.

Challedon Off For Hollywood

William L. Brann's Challendon, third in the Massachusetts Handicap, leaves today to run in the $50,000 added Hollywood Gold Cup, Trainer Lou Schaefer announced.

The Challenger, 2nd. colt has been assigned 133 pounds in that race and will be ridden in his West Coast engagement by George Woolf. The Montana boy rides Dixiana Farm's Sirocco in the Arlington Classic Saturday and will go to the Coast from there.

YANKEES SERIOUS THIS TRIP

By the ASSOCIATED PRESS

The American League still is boiling over, like a pot of hot porridge, and there doesn't seem to be anything anyone ca ndo about it.

The Cleveland Indians stumbled into their fifth consecutive defeat yesterday, 9-6, at the hands of the ever dangerous New oYrk Yankees. Four losses got 'em into first place, but five tok 'em out.

Both the Boston Red Sox and Detroit Tigers had a chance to scoot into the lead, but when they finished battling each oher at the end of 11 wild innings, it was Detroit that was on top, 10-8.

The Yankees sewed up their victory in the first two innings. Buddy Rosar homered with the bases loaded in the first, and Red Rolfe hit for the circuit with one on in the second.

Joe DiMaggio extended his hitting streak to 13 consecutive games by poling his 17th home run in the seventh inning.

POOR BROWNS

Although they are in fourth place, the world champions are only four games behind the leaders.

The amazing Washington Senators, who were in last place only last Sunday, chalked up their fifth triumph in a row with a 5-4 decision over the Chicago White Sox.

Lemons Solters sent the Sox away to a good start with a three-run homner in the first inging, but the Chicago pitchers couldn't hold onto it.

In the eighth inning two singles and a perfect squeeze bunt by Buddy Myer scored the tying run and then Lefty E dSmith walked two men to force across the deciding run.

The streak to end all streaks, however, was the one the St. Louis Browns extended to 14 games, all losses, yesterday. This isn't a record—yet—but it is one more defeat than the Browns ever had suffered in succession before.

The 10-3 victory that the Philadelphia Athletics took from them was a combination of five-hit furling by Johnny Babich and a 17-hit assault on five St. Louis slingers.

TAMULIS DOES IT

The National League program was abbreviated to two games, and the Brooklyn Dodgers made the most of the idleness of the Cincinnati Reds by whipping the Chicago Cubs 7-4 to narrow the gap between first and second place to three games.

Credit for the triumph went to Lefty Vito Tamulis, who blanked the Cubs for six innings on one hit after Chicago had got rough with Curt Davis in the third, when Bill Nicholson and Hank Leiber hit homers.

Carl Hubbell got the chance he wanted to work in a night game and handcuffed the Pittsburgh Pirates 6-1 on six hits.

Esposito Eyes More Trophies For Mantelpiece

Jimmy Esposito, Brookline's 135-pound amateur boxer, is taking himself serious these days, having qualified for the Golden Gloves finals to be held at Dilboy Field, July 24.

J. Esposito

After a layoff of more than a year and a half Jimmy who represented New England in the national championships in 1938 entered the third round of the Golden Gloves trials at Dilboy Field and came through in as fine a style as he ever showed when he was the talk of the amateur boxing circles in 1937 and 1938.

Surprised at his own showing Jimmy decided that he would add a few more trophies for his living room mantelpiece by getting down to business and shooting for some of the big "mugs."

Every day Jimmy goes through a strenuous workout at Al Davidson's gym in Roxbury.

Galehouse Hurls

Gehringer elected to get Owen but York's throw to "Red" Kress trapped him between first and second and he was run down for the second out.

In the meantime, Jim Tabor had taken a 30-foot lead off third base and when Kress heaved the ball to Mike Higgins, the bridegroom was caught between third and home and Higgins' throw to "Birdie" Tebbetts who nalled him going into the plate for a most unorthodox triple play, which cost the Red Sox the ball game.

The skeptics will tell you that Joe Heving heaved the game away in the first of the seventh when he uncorked a wild throw to first base on Barney McCosky's bunt, allowing "Red" Kress and Pete Fox to score.

But it was dumb base running on the part of Johnny Peacock and Jim Tabor that sent the Red Sox down to defeat.

There isn't any excuse in the world for one, let alone two, base runners getting picked off a la Peacock and Tabor.

It was just one of those things. The Red Sox thought that they had the Tigers on the ropes, and so they elected to carry them for a few rounds, with the usual result. Detroit popped them on the chin in the 11th inning, pushed across two runs and downed them back into third place.

But, today is another day.

Denny Galehouse will oppose Tommy Bridges this afternoon in the fourth and final game of the current series.

If the Yankees take another fall out of the Cleveland Indians and the Red Sox beat the Tigers, the Cronlumen will move into a tie for first place with Manager Del Baker's Motor City outfit.

Tommy Chatfield Eyes 2 New Outboard Marks

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., July 19 (AP)—Young Tommy Chatfield of New York City, sent the Havre de Grace Yacht Club's 11th annual regatta off today with the announcement that he would attempt to set two new world's powerboat records with his pair of crack speedsters.

Chatfield brought down his "Viper" to compete in the 225 cubic inch craft events, and entered "The Scoundrel" in the events for 91 cubic inch boats.

The "Viper" has ben clocked at 90 miles an hour in unofficial tests, better than the record, and "The Scoundrel" has hit 60 miles an hour—fast enough to set a record if duplicated in an official run.

Upwards of 100 entries, representing the East's best powerboat performers, were here for the two-day meet.

Chatfield won the Virginia Gold Cup at Hampton Roads with the "Viper" two weeks ago, and placed first in the Cambridge regatta last week. He missed the first heat of the event, however, so failed to win on final point standings.

Although a newcomer to powerboat racing, Chatfield is an old hand at the speed business. He was an alternate on the U. S. Olympic bobsled team in 1938, and in 1937 he raced motorcycles in France and Italy.

Today's program was given over to the inboards with only one outboard event—the unlimited—which was to send sputtering craft of all sizes onto the broad Susquehanna river course late in the afternoon.

Finals i nthe inboard events and the outboard races will be held tomorrow.

Connors Sees Raynham Park Dog Schoolings

Under the watchful eyes of Chairman Charles F. Connors of the Massachusetts Racing Commission the second night's schoolings of the greyhounds at Raynham Park went through to a conclusion that satisfied upwards of 1000 of the greyhound followers.

One of the outstanding races was that in which a crack field of speedsters staged a merry battle with Byron Nelson, owned by J. P. Mullins, emerging the winner. The Whitehead kennels' Buzzy Roll and Rip Snorter which won the Nursery Stake and the Futurity Stake at the West Flagler track last winter in Florida, were in the field beaten by Byron Nelson.

Rescue 'At Sea' ...From the Air

Two Saved

One of the most dramatic photographs ever made of a rescue "at sea" is this... as the Michigan Coast Guard's new life-saving amphibian plane landed in the rough Straits of Mackinac to pick up two fishermen whose craft was wrecked. The victims, Joseph Schley, Jr., and Ernest Anderson, both of Cheboygan, Mich., can be seen swimming toward the plane. The wrecked craft sank a few minutes later.

Exchange

On a train at Geneva, Switzerland, these French nuns and children are some of the civilian prisoners exchanged through the central information bureau for prisoners of war. They were "swapped" by the Nazis for German captives in France ... before the armistice.
